HAVERHILL INSCRIPTIONS.

PENTUCKET CEMETERY.

THE first meeting house in Haverhill stood in what is now the front part of the ancient Pentucket cemetery. In November, 1660, the town voted that the land "behind the meeting house should be reserved for a burial ground;" the dead probably having been buried there previously. The following are all the inscriptions now to be found there bearing dates prior to 1800.

In Memory of Hannah the daughter of Mr Caleb and Mrs Margret Adams who made her Exit from this to the World of Spirits April ye 12th 1780 aged 13 years 6m 3ds A moment stay as you pafs by and view the place where I do lie consider that you fhortly muft like me Return unto the duft.

of the Rev. EDWARD BARNARD A M
Paſtor of the Firſt Church in this Town
Who died Janry 26 1774 in the 54th Year of his Age and 31d of his Miniſtry

In him were united the good Scholar great Divine and exemplary Chriſtian and Miniſter
His Underſtanding was excellent Judgement
Eminently a Man of Prayer
As a Preacher equalled by Few—exceeded by None
Indefatigable in the Diſcharge of his miniſterial Duty and profeſsing the moſt tender concern for the Happiness of thoſe committed to his Charge
His Piety was rational Diſpoſition benevolent
Of approved Integrity conſummate Prudence great Modetty and Simplicity of Manner
A kind Huſband tender Father faithful Friend and agreeable Companion
His Life irreproachable and Death greatly lamented by all who knew his worth

Mark the perfect Man and behold the upright for the End of that Man is peace

His grateful Flock have erected this Monument

His youthful bloom was took away
To the cold grave and there to lay
Till Jesus comes to summons all
That ever did since Adam's fall.

In Memory of
James, son of Mr Moses
& Mrs Hannah Marsh, who died April, 17th 1795,
in the 2d year of his age.

Here innocence & beauty lies, whose breath
Was snatched by early not untimely death,
Hence did he go just as he did begin
Sorrows to know before he knew to sin.
Death that does sin & sorrow thus prevent
Is the next blessing to a life well spent.

THE OLD BRICK OVEN.

BY JOHN S. ADAMS.

I remember the pasture bespangled with posies,
The wide spreading field, gay with tassels of corn,
The hedge, where in childhood I sought the wild roses,
And the old-fashioned farmhouse in which I was born.
I recall the quaint dresser, the long, high-backed settle,
Whereon the whole family sat in a row;
The pot-hooks and trammels, the crane and the kettle,
And that famous brick oven we had long ago.

. . . .

A certain tin plate in my memory lingers,
Kept erect on the hearth by a flatiron prop,
Containing a cake made by dexterous fingers
And skillfully spread with a well-managed flop!
'Twas constructed of meal, if I am not mistaken,
Of mixed "rye 'n' injun they fashioned the dough;
But it didn't compare with the choice weekly baking
From that famous brick oven we had long ago.

. . . .

And when round the table we gathered next morning,
No victuals appeared that were bought at the store;
But beans that crisp pork like a crown was adorning,
And luscious brown bread, flanked by pudding galore;
For those beans on the summit, so brown and inviting,
And the whey in that pudding we youngsters would go;
Oh, those glorious breakfasts of which I am writing
From that famous brick oven we had long ago.

Prate to me nevermore of your new-fangled ranges,
Each dealer in stoves in the East and the West,
On his stock is eternally ringing the changes,
And every one vows that his own is the best.

I'm weary of cities: of people mendacious,
Whose rickety bakers' carts dash to and fro,
And I sigh for the farmhouse, the fireplace spacious,
And that famous brick oven we had long ago.

BRIDGES GENEALOGY.

The head of the American family of BRIDGES is

EDMUND BRIDGES[1], who was born about 1612, came to America, from London, England, in the ship James, in 1635, and settled in Lynn. He was made a freeman Sept. 7, 1639; and was a blacksmith. SALEM IN 1700. NO. 30.*

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on the opposite page represents that part of South field in Salem which is bounded by Fairfield and Holly streets, the harbor and South river. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of four hundred and fifty feet to an inch. There were no houses standing upon the premises in 1700.

The dotted lines running across the western end of the map show the location of Canal street, along the western side of which is the location of the Boston and Maine Railroad. The braces marked "a" show where the present Lafayette street runs; those marked "b," where Fairfield street begins; "c," Lagrange street; "d," West lane; "e," Gardner street; "f," Hancock street; "g," Roslyn street; "h," Holly street; and "i," Leach street.

The highway shown on the map was laid out from Salem to Marblehead in 1666, and the present Lafayette street was laid out in 1800; the old road being discontinued. The old road was called the highway through the South field in 1683; ye country road, 1690; road leading to Marblehead, 1742; and the highway leading from Salem to Marblehead in 1787. The new road was called South street as early as 1806, and until the visit of Lafayette in 1824, when the name was changed to Lafayette street, by which name it has since been known.

Canal street was laid out in 1890.

That portion of Lafayette street south of the engine house was laid out in 1800; and that part north in 1805.

Lagrange street was laid out as a public way in 1858.

West lane was so laid out in 1903, though it had been a private way for several years.

Gardner street was laid out as a public way from Lafayette street to Cabot street in 1854; and to the railroad location in 1870.

Hancock street was laid out as a public way from Lafayette street to Cabot street in 1856; and to the railroad in 1870.

Roslyn street was laid out as early as 1860; being laid out as a public highway the next year.

Holly street is mentioned as early as 1854.

Leach street was there in 1806, though it was laid out as a public way in 1859.

The harbor was called the harbor in 1669; ye sea, 1690; Stage point cove or harbor, 1692; ye sea or salt water, 1695; Salem harbor, 1728; ye South river, 1734; ye South harbor, 1761; and Salem South river, 1795.

The South river was called ye mill pond from the mill that was built in 1666, and ye river yt goes up to Castle hill, 1669.

Samuel Archer Lot. This lot originally belonged to Samuel Archard, sr., and he apparently conveyed the eastern end to James Underwood and the western part to George Emery of Salem before 1662. These men apparently released it to Samuel Archer before 1692, as John Marston and John Pickering deposed, Feb. 8, 1715-6, that Samuel Archer had possessed, sowed, planted and mowed this lot since before 1692.*

John Robinson Lot. This lot originally belonged to Samuel Archard, and to George Emery of Salem Aug. 23, 1662, when he conveyed it to George Keazer of Salem, tanner.* Mr. Keazer died in 1690, and when his real estate was divided, Oct. 12, 1694, this lot became the estate of his son, John Keazer of Haverhill, tanner.† For twenty-one pounds, John Keazer conveyed it to John Robinson of Salem, tailor, April 3, 1695.‡ Mr. Robinson owned it until 1706.

Eleazer Keazer Lot. This lot originally belonged to Samuel Archard, and to George Emery of Salem Aug. 23, 1662, when he conveyed it to George Keazer of Salem, tanner.* Mr. Keazer died in 1690, and in the division of his real estate, Oct. 12, 1694, this lot became the property of his son Eleazer Keazer, who owned it in 1700.

John Robinson Lot. Richard Prince, sr., of Salem, owned this lot in 1662, and died possessed of it in 1675, having devised it to his son Richard Prince of Salem, who conveyed it to John Robinson of Salem, tailor, March 28, 1688.§ Mr. Robinson owned it until 1706.

Stephen Daniel Lot. Richard Prince, sr., of Salem, owned this lot in 1662, and died, possessed of it, in 1675, having devised it to his son Richard Prince of Salem. Apparently the latter conveyed it, before 1688, to Stephen Daniel, who owned it as late as 1700.

James Hardy Lot. This lot belonged to Joseph Hardy as early as 1675. He died in 1688, having devised it to his son James Hardy, who owned it in 1700.

John Cromwell Lot. This lot originally belonged to William Lord, sr., of Salem, cutler, who conveyed it to Richard Prince of Salem April 14, 1668.‖ Mr. Prince died in 1675, having devised it to his son Samuel Prince of Salem, tailor, who, for fourteen pounds, conveyed it to John Cromwell of Salem, slaughterer, Feb. 15, 1682-3.* Mr. Cromwell died possessed of the lot in 1700. It was then appraised at sixteen pounds, and is described in the inventory as being near Capt. Gardner's land.

Stephen Daniel and Mary Dean Lot. This lot originally belonged to William Lord, sr., of Salem, cutler, who conveyed it to Richard Prince of Salem April 14, 1668.† Mr Prince died in 1675, having devised it to his son Joseph Prince. The latter died in 1678, having devised it to his brother Jonathan Prince and the two children of his brother Stephen Daniel, Stephen Daniel and Mary Dean. In the inventory of the estate of Joseph Prince this lot was appraised at twenty pounds. Apparently, Jonathan Prince released his interest in the lot to the other two owners before 1685, when he died; and the latter were apparently its owners in 1700.

Daniel Bacon Lot. This lot originally belonged to William Lord, sr., of Salem, cutler, who conveyed it to Richard Prince of Salem April 14, 1668.† Mr. Prince died in 1675, having devised it to his son Jonathan Prince of Salem, cordwainer, who conveyed it to Thomas Maule of Salem, shopkeeper, July 30, 1681.‡ Mr. Maule conveyed it to John Lambert, sr., of Salem, mariner, Oct. 14, 1690.§ For fifteen pounds, Mr. Lambert conveyed it to his son-in-law Daniel Bacon, jr., of Salem, shipwright, March 2, 1695-6; and Mr. Bacon owned it until 1733.

John Pickering Lot. This lot belonged to Joseph Hardy as early as 1668. He died in 1688, having devised this lot to his son James Hardy; but William Hardy (was James called William here?) and his mother Martha Hardy (James Hardy's mother) conveyed it to John Pickering, jr., of Salem March 10, 1691-2.¶ Mr. Pickering owned it in 1700.

Samuel Robinson Lot. This lot belonged to Joseph Hardy as early as 1668. He died in 1688, having devised it to his son William Hardy, who, with his mother Martha Hardy conveyed the lot, for seven pounds and ten shillings, to Samuel Robinson, jr., of Salem, laborer, Dec. 14, 1695.* Mr. Robinson owned it in 1700.

Alice Pickering Lot. This lot early belonged to William Allen of Manchester, carpenter, and, 9 : 4 mo : 1652, he conveyed it to John Bridgeman of Salem.† Mr. Bridgeman died in 1655, when he devised his estate to Mr. Curwin, in satisfaction of his claim, and what remained to the deceased's daughter Mary, who subsequently married a Smith. William Flint of Salem owned the lot when he died in 1673, it being appraised at six pounds. Mr. Flint's widow, Alice Flint, who had a life estate therein, conveyed the lot to her daughter Alice Pickering, "for her great trouble, cost & charge in keeping & maintaining me," Aug. 22, 1696.‡ Mrs. Pickering owned it in 1700.

Paul Mansfield Lot. This lot may have belonged to Hugh Laskin very early, and later to Timothy Laskin. It belonged to Paul Mansfield of Salem at the time of his death, in the summer of 1696. He devised it to his son Paul Mansfield. There was some marsh at the western end of the lot. Paul Mansfield, jr., was a mariner, and lived in Salem. He owned the lot until Dec. 9, 1701.

The Deacons Marsh. Evidence relative to the Deacons Marsh is rather vague. It was apparently laid out to the deacons of the church here in their official capacity for their benefit, perhaps for the support of the communion table. It was so called as early as 1668 and as late as 1812. No record of its sale by any one has been found as yet.

Sarah Williams Lot. This quarter-acre of salt marsh belonged to Thomas Browning quite early. He died in the spring of 1671, having devised his real estate to his daughters, Sarah, wife of Joseph Williams, and Deborah, wife of Isaac Meachum. By an agreement of division between these sisters and their husbands, dated 17 : 2 : 1675, this lot of marsh was assigned to Sarah Williams.† She owned it as late as 1719.

SPINNING BEE.

Linebrook, Auguſt 17, 1769.

On Tueſday the 15th Inſtant, thirteen young Ladies, belonging to this Pariſh, met at the Houſe of the Rev. Mr. George Leſlie, on the Deſign of a Spinning Match. Several of the Ladies bro't their Materials with them: Part whereof was their own Bounty, or that of the Families to which they belonged; and Part, the Bounty of other generouſly diſpoſed Perſons in the Neighbourhood.

One of theſe young Ladies carded the whole of the Day; and of the other twelve, ſome carded and ſpun, and others only ſpun. When the Produce of their Induſtry came to be computed at Night, it amounted to 28 Run and 8 Knots; all which they generouſly preſented, as a Gift, to the Family where they were aſſembled. Two of theſe Ladies ſpun 70 Knots each, one carded and ſpun 38 Knots: Upon an Average, the Amount of their Induſtry was between 47 and 48 Knots to each Perſon. The Yarn is all excellent good, ſtrong and even ſpun; fit in every Reſpect to anſwer the purpoſes for which it was deſigned. One young Lady, who was detained at home by the foulneſs of the Weather, has ſince preſented the Fruit of her Induſtry, which makes the whole to amount to upwards of 30 Run. After the Labours of the Day were finiſhed, the Rev'd Mr. Leſslie entertained the Spinners, and a Number of others of both ſexes, who met at his Houſe upon that Occaſion, with a Diſcourſe on the Duty of referring all our Actions, in the common Buſineſs of Life as well as in the Duties of Religion, to the Glory of God, from Proverbs, iii. Ch. 6 v. In all thy Ways acknowledge him, and he ſhall direct thy Paths.

OLD POOR TAVERN, NEWBURY.

This old homestead of the Poors was situated on Newbury Neck, on the original main thoroughfare from Boston to Portsmouth, and about a quarter of a mile from the southerly end of Parker River bridge.

The house originally consisted of one square room on the ground floor and a chamber above it, the chimney being on the eastern end. The inside of the house remained in an unfinished condition. It was built by John Poor, the immigrant, about 1650, and he lived here until he was frozen to death, while lost in the forest, in November, 1684.

The next occupant of the homestead was his son John Poor, who died Feb. 15, 1700-1.

It was next owned and occupied by the latter's son Jonathan Poor, who built on the eastern end an addition as large as the original house, the new part being that end nearest the front of the picture, which is the frontispiece of this number of The Antiquarian. Subsequently, he added the leanto; and died June 30, 1742.

The next occupant was Jonathan Poor's son John Poor, who kept the ferry over Parker River where the bridge now stands, and continued as ferryman until 1758, when the bridge was built. He added the ell to the house, probably for the ferry office. John Poor died here Sept. 15, 1783.

The homestead was next owned and occupied by John Poor's son Capt. Jonathan Poor, who conducted a tavern here, probably having in the ell his sample room, where "whistles" could be wet or warmed. The old swinging tavern sign is in the possession of the Newburyport Marine Society.

This was the half-way house between Rowley and Newburyport; and Captain Poor continued the business of an innkeeper until 1806, when the opening of the Boston and Newburyport Turnpike drew the through travel to the new route. Captain Poor died March 19, 1807.

The next occupant was Captain Poor's son Samuel Poor; and he died July 17, 1849.

The house was then occupied by the latter's son Samuel Poor, esq., who died June 6, 1878; and he was succeeded by his son Alfred Poor.

The old house was taken down in the spring of 1890; and a new house was built upon the same site. This is one of the rare instances where a homestead remained in the same family for eight generations.

NOTES.

Edward Renouf of Marblehead advertised that he intended to sail for Jersey by the first of September.

NEWBURY-PORT, Auguſt 9, 1769.

Yeſterday the Reverend Mr. JOHN MURRAY, left this Town, accompanied by a Number of Gentlemen, to Haverhill; and from thence intends for Boſton, in order to return to the Eaſtern Country. He has preached every Day for ten Days paſt, to vaſt Numbers of People, from Five to Ten Thouſand at a time, and once was obliged to preach in the open Field, at Mr. Leſley's Pariſh, the Concourſe of People being ſo great: his laſt Diſcourſe was delivered at the Rev. Mr. Marſh's Meeting Houſe. A conſiderable Number of the Clergy attended his Preaching; and perhaps no one was ever more univerſally approved of in this Country. Prejudice, Bigotry, and Uncharitableneſs ſeem'd to be wholly laid aſide. As to any Reports being propagated, that this Gentleman forces himſelf into other Mens Labours, it is far otherwiſe; he rather has a happy Talent in healing than making Diviſions.

ANSWERS.

475. Isaac Johnson who married Elizabeth Coffin, in 1761, was the third son of Eleazer and Elizabeth (Austin) Johnson, and born in Charlestown, Mass., March 26, 1729. (From notes of the late John F. Johnson in Amesbury public library.)—E. A. B.

485. In his genealogy of Thomas Gardner, planter, of Salem, and some of his descendants, Dr. Frank A. Gardner states that "Richard Gardenar of the Mayflower was the first man of the name to come to New England. He was unmarried. The following probate entry, quoted in the Somerset and Dorset Notes and Queries, volume III, page 148, probably refers to him: 'Richard Gardner, Bachelor, of Ozmonton. Died abroad. Alice Androwes, of Weymouth, spinster, was appointed administratrix, 27 May, 1626.'"—Ed.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Early Catholic Church in Massachusetts. By William B. Sullivan. Boston, 1907.

This is a seventeen-page pamphlet, being a paper read at the banquet of the St. Mary's School Alumni Association, Salem, Mass., Oct. 15, 1907. It contains a good deal of information, and is interesting.

Marquis de La Fayette. Newburyport, Mass., 1907.

The Towle Manufacturing Company of Newburyport have prepared and issued a sixth number of their colonial series of pamphlets, illustrating their styles of silver ware. This is an account of the life of Marie Joseph Paul Yves Roch Gilbert Dumotier Marquis de La Fayette, major-general in the service of America and the noblest patriot of the French Revolution.

It contains fifty large pages of text, and many interesting engravings of things and scenes connected with La Fayette, with several portraits.

This number will be sent for fifteen cents in postage to any address by the Towle Manufacturing Company, Newburyport, Mass.

The Historical Collections of the Topsfield Historical Society. Volume X. Topsfield, Mass., 1905.

This volume is another of the valuable publications of The Topsfield Historical Society, and the entire series is an illustration of what can be done by a society of limited means in printing historical information and records. It contains one hundred and fifty-two octavo pages; and its principal article is a copy of the register of baptisms, marriages and burials at St. Margaret's, in the parish of Toppesfield, England, transcribed by Rev. H. B. Barnes, rector of the church.

At the end of this volume is a subject index to the entire ten volumes.

Revolutionary Pension Declarations, Strafford County, N. H., 1820-1832. Manchester, N. H., 1907.

This pamphlet of thirty-five octavo pages, comprising sketches of Soldiers of the Revolution, was compiled from the court records by Lucien Thompson of Durham, N. H., and reprinted for private distribution by William Lincoln Palmer of Cambridge, Mass., from the Granite State Magazine.

These declarations were found on file in the office of the clerk of the superior court, in the Strafford county court house at Dover. They were not indexed, and no court official was aware of their existence. These declarations give the service of each soldier.

THE DIARY OF WILLIAM BENTLEY, D. D., Pastor of the East Church, Salem, Mass. Volume II. Salem, Mass., 1907.

This volume of the diary of Doctor Bentley covers the period from January, 1793, to December, 1802. The first volume was issued by the Essex Institute in 1905; and this one is in the same style and size as that. This volume contains five hundred and six pages; and is illustrated with engravings of vessels, meeting houses, the chain bridge at Newburyport, Charter street cemetery in Salem, a fire engine of 1748, the Derby mansion in Salem, portraits of several men whose names are mentioned in the diary, and a view of Squam river in West Gloucester.

This volume of Doctor Bentley's important journal is as interesting as the first is, and as rich in detail and acuteness of observation.

The price of this volume, bound in cloth, is $3.50. Address The Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.

THE OLD FARMER AND HIS ALMANACK. By George Lyman Kittredge. Boston, 1904.

This volume will delight many readers, especially those who turn over the leaves of old almanacs, expecting something interesting to turn up. This book contains the pith of the Robert Bailey Thomas almanacs since he published the first, for 1793. Mr. Thomas was of Welsh descent, and born at Grafton, Mass., April 24, 1766. He died in West Boylston May 19, 1846, at the age of four-score. Two portraits of him are given in this volume.

The principal chapters are devoted to a sketch of Mr. Thomas, the man of the signs, artistic embellishment, wit and wisdom of the farmer's calendar, etc. The engravings are quite numerous, being several title-pages of almanacs, cuts at the head of the calendar pages, Father Time, reproductions of miscellaneous illustrations of the almanacs, specimen pages, etc.

This volume contains four hundred and three octavo pages, bound, and finely gotten up. It is published by William Ware & Co., Boston, the publishers of the almanacs.

MATTAPOISETT AND OLD ROCHESTER, MASSACHUSETTS. New York, 1907.

This is a volume of four hundred and twenty-four small octavo pages, bound in cloth. It contains the history of the towns of Mattapoisett and Old Rochester and also, in part, of Marion and a portion of Wareham; having been prepared under the direction of a committee of the town of Mattapoisett. From ancient Rochester, Marion was set-off in 1852 and Mattapoisett in 1857. In this book, is given a very complete history of Rochester down to 1857 and since that date the history of Mattapoisett.

The writers of the book are Mary Hall Leonard, Lemuel LeBaron Dexter, James S. Burbank, Lester W. Jenney, Mary Frances Briggs and the late Hon. Lemuel LeBaron Holmes. Many extracts from the records of the towns and of the churches are given, to the great assistance and delight of the genealogist and historian.

Mattapoisett was long a thriving fishing and shipbuilding village, and as a town it flourished in its farming and marine interests; but it is to-day a summer resort, the sound of the shipbuilder's hammer having ceased.

Many engravings, most of them fine half-tones, add to the interest and value of the volume. They consist of maps, historic places, scenery, the harbor, villages, houses, meeting-houses, the common, streets, town house academy, portrait of Rev. Thomas Robbins, ship Niger, bark Sunbeam, schoolhouses, old engine house, etc

The volume is interestingly written, and its mechanical execution is fine. It is is published by The Grafton Press, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City, and the price is two dollars net. If it is to be sent by mail fifteen cents must be added for postage.

THE ESSEX ANTIQUARIAN.

VOL. XII. SALEM, MASS., APRIL, 1908. NO. 2.

RIDING IN OLDEN TIMES.

IN the earliest years of this colony, travel by land was on foot. Various records give details of travelling in this way. In 1631, Governor Winthrop, Captain Underhill and other officers, went on foot from Boston to Saugus, and the next day to Salem. In 1635, Roger Williams undoubtedly walked to what is now Rhode Island. In 1637, Governor Winthrop, with a large escort, passed through Salem on foot, on his way to and from Ipswich.

The first settlements being along the water front, on bays or rivers, the earliest means of conveyance was the boat,—the dugout or canoe. The water was as prepared for travel then as it is now, whereas in the surrounding forest paths fit for horseback riding were not in existence, even though horses had been at hand. The boat has always been a favorite means of travelling for both pleasure and business.

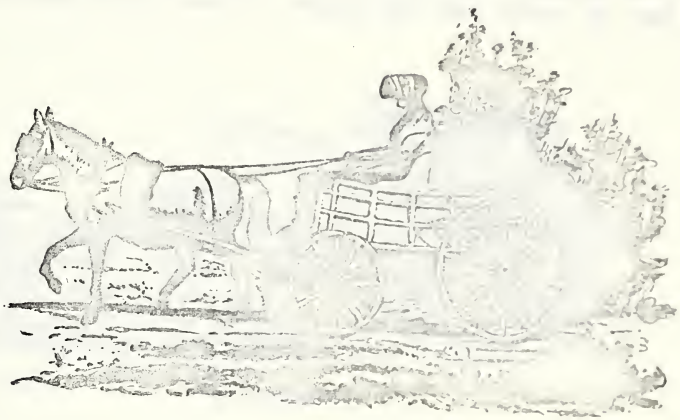
Horses were soon introduced, and bridle paths through the woods had to be prepared by the thinning out of trees and removal of rocks and underbrush along a selected course. Men rode astride, but women and children usually sat upon a pillion behind the men. Thus a family proceeded to church or market or went on a visit.

The first vehicles used for riding were probably heavy sleds, drawn by horses or oxen. These were very advantageous in getting about during the long winters, when snow deeply covered the ground. The first sleighs made and used here were really small sleds with a top, high-backed, containing a seat. The back and seat combined had the appearance of a small settle which was used before the hearth fire. But those vehicles have evolved into the beautifully painted and dainty sleighs of to-day.

The earliest wheel vehicle for riding, which the writer has found noticed, is the calash. One of them was advertised to be let by Henry Sharp, proprietor of the tavern called the "Sign of the Galley," in Salem, in 1701. This was a light carriage, with a hood, and low wheels.

The following engraving illustrates a type of wagon which was commonly used very early, and could be seen on the roads, especially by farmers going to market, as late as fifty years ago.

The chair, or chaise, as it was later exclusively called, came into use here just prior to the Revolution. Some of these carriages were made, subsequently, so that the top could be tipped back. The frontispiece of this number of the Antiquarian represents a fine specimen of the old-fashioned "shay," or chaise. It is a photograph of the chaise in the museum of the Essex Institute at Salem. It is in excellent condition, and might well have been the subject of the poem by Oliver Wendell Holmes, entitled "The Deacon's Masterpiece," or "The One-Horse Shay:"—



AN OLD-FASHIONED TEAM.

"He would build one shay to beat the taown
'n the keountry 'n all the kentry raoun';
It should be so built that it couldn' break daown:
——"Fur," said the Deacon, "'t's mighty plain
Thut the weakes' place mus' stan' the strain;
'n' the way t' fix it, uz I maintain, is only jest
T' make that place uz strong uz the rest."
So the Deacon inquired of the village folk
Where he could find the strongest oak,
That could n't be split nor bent nor broke,—
That was for spokes and floor and sills;
He sent for lance wood to make the thills;
The crossbars were ash, from the straightest trees,
The panels of white-wood, that cuts like cheese,
But lasts like iron for things like these;
The hubs of logs from the "Settler's ellum,"—
Last of its timber,—they couldn't sell 'em,
Never an axe had seen their chips,
And the wedges flew from between their lips,

Their blunt ends frizzled like celery-tips;
Step and prop-iron, bolt and screw,
Spring, tire, axle, and linch-pin too,
Steel of the finest, bright and blue;
Thoroughbrace bison-skin, thick and wide;
Boot, top, dasher from tough old hide
Found in the pit when the tanner died.
That was the way he "put her through,"—
"There!" said the Deacon, "naow she'll dew!"

The sulky, which was then very light and held only one person, was also in use prior to the Revolution.

The curricle, also in use here at that time, was an open two-wheeled carriage, drawn by a span of hosses. This kind of vehicle had been used probably for many years, as, in 1771, John Adams, afterward president of the United States, wrote in his diary, that when riding the circuit of the courts, on the way from Malden to Lynn, he "Overtook Judge Cushing in his old curricle with lean horses, and Dick, his negro, at his right hand, driving the curricle." Some of these carriages were made so that the top could fall back.

The first coach that the writer has found mentioned was one owned by the Hon. William Browne, of Salem, who built the great mansion on Folly hill. This was a close four-wheeled carriage with seats at both ends.

The first public conveyance in Essex county was a "large stage," drawn by two horses, and carrying four persons and the driver. This made weekly trips between Boston and Portsmouth, passing through Lynn, Salem, Ipswich and Newbury, in 1761. In 1763, Bartholomew Stavers of Portsmouth began to run over the same route, a stage coach, drawn by four or six horses, and carrying six persons inside. In 1768, Benjamin Coats, landlord of the Ship tavern, in Salem, gave notice that he had bought a "new stage chaise," which would be run between Salem and Boston on week days. He already had one chaise in commission. In 1770, Benjamin Hart advertised that he had "left riding the single horse post between Boston and Portsmouth, and now drives the post stage lately improved by John Noble. He sets out from Boston every Friday morning and from Portsmouth on Tuesday morning following. The above conveyance has been found very useful, and now more so, as there is another curricle improved by J. S. Hart, who sets off from Portsmouth the same day this does from Boston, by which opportunity offers twice a week for travellers to either place." In 1774, Maj. Ezra Lunt began running a weekly stage between Boston and Newburyport.

About 1796, Benjamin Hale of Newburyport, the proprietor of a stage, improved the springs of stages, and invented the trunk rack. Chaises were built in Newburyport in 1776 by Moses Brown; and stage coaches were subsequently made in Salem.

Stage companies were formed, and turnpikes, to facilitate through travel, came into existence in 1803 and 1804. These corporations, both of stage lines and turnpikes, went out of being when steam railroads came into use about 1840.

The departure of the old stage led one to write of their disappearance many years ago, as follows:—

"Never again shall we gather at the cottage gate, as the clatter of wheels and the cloud of dust approach, to welcome the aged parent,—the coming guest,—the daughter home from school. Never again shall we linger in the open doorway of a New England homestead, in tender parting with the young son setting out for sea, or on some distant westward venture,—to speed the lovers starting together on the life-long journey,—never again cast longing glances after that receding freight of dear ones, until at last the winding road and over-hanging elm trees part us, and we sit sadly down to listen,

> "While faint from farther distance borne
> Are heard the clanging hoof and horn!"

Never again will the midnight watcher by the silent bedside hear the mail-stage arrive and go, leaving its messages of love and sorrow for the sleeping townsfolk and sing, with Hannah Gould,

> "'The rattling of that reckless wheel
> That brings the bright or boding seal
> To crown thy hopes or end thy fears,
> To light thy smiles or draw thy tears,
> As line on line is read.'

"Famous levelers were these old stage coaches and masters in etiquette also! What chance-medley of social elements they brought about! What infinite attrition of human particles,—what jostling of ribs and elbows,—what contact inconvenient, nose to nose! What consequent rounding and smoothing of angles and corners,—what a test of good-nature,—what a tax on forbearance,—what a school of mutual consideration! For how else could a dozen passengers consent to be boxed up and shaken together for a day, but upon condition that each was to exhibit the best side of his nature and that only?

"To the next generation the old stage coach will be as shadowy and unreal a thing as were those which appeared, musty and shattered, to the uncle of the one-eyed Bagman in Pickwick, while he dozed at midnight in the Edinboro' court-yard."

SALEM IN 1700. NO. 31.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map opposite represents that part of Salem lying between the harbor on the east and the creek and marsh on the west, and between Leach street on the north to a point a few rods south of Clifton avenue. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of four hundred and fifty feet to an inch. No houses were standing on this territory in 1700.

The highway through this section, as shown on the map, was laid out in 1666, as stated in preceding articles, from Salem to Marblehead. It was called the highway very early; the highway that leads toward Marblehead, 1723; the highway that goes through the south field, 1728; and Lafayette street in 1824.

The dotted lines show the location of many of the present streets. The brace marked "a" represents the beginning of Laurel street; "b," Willow avenue; "c," Ocean avenue; and those marked "d," Lafayette street.

Cliff street was laid out and accepted in 1900.

Clifton avenue was originally a narrow path leading from the main highway to the water at Forest River park; and was laid out as a public highway from Lafayette street to Summit avenue in 1885, being extended easterly in 1890.

Eden street was laid out in 1870.

Forest avenue was laid out from Lafayette street to Park avenue in 1880.

Glendale street was laid out in 1887.

Green street was laid out from Leach to Eden street in 1870, and extended to Messervy street in 1888.

Hazel street was laid out in 1869.

Holly street was accepted in 1875.

Laurel street was laid out in 1871.

Linden street was laid out from Holly to Laurel street in 1864, and subsequently extended.

Meadow avenue was laid out in 1871.

Messervy street was laid out in 1871.

Ocean avenue was laid out from Lafayette street to Park avenue in 1870, and extended to the railroad in 1872.

Summit avenue was laid out from Leach street to Ocean avenue in 1870, and extended to Clifton avenue in 1886.

Willow avenue was laid out in 1871.

Wisteria street was laid out in 1897.

The water on the east was called ye harbor in 1658; the South harbor, 1666; ye water or harbor, 1669; Salem harbor, 1686; and ye harbor or salt water in 1696.

Samuel Robinson and Caleb Buffum Lot. This lot was owned by Richard Reed of Marblehead, shoreman, and William Charles. The latter died, having devised his half part to his grandchildren, James Dennis, jr., Amos Dennis, and Agnes, wife of Thomas Trefry, all of Marblehead. These grandchildren conveyed their half interest in the lot to Samuel Robinson of Salem, carman or carter, Sept. 30, 1695.* Mr. Robinson conveyed his half part of this lot to his father, Samuel Robinson, sr., of Salem June 2, 1696.†

The other half interest, owned by Richard Reed in 1695, was conveyed by him to Caleb Buffum of Salem, yeoman, June 27, 1698‡; and Mr. Reed's eldest son and heir, Samuel Reed of Marblehead, released the interest to Mr. Buffum on the same day.

Mr. Robinson and Mr. Buffum owned the lot together in 1700.

Estate of John Pickering Lot. Joshua Rea may have owned this lot very early. Samuel Archer of Salem owned it about the same time and died possessed of it in 1667. The lot was then valued at twelve pounds. It came into the possession of Mr. Archer's son Samuel Archer of Salem, carpenter, who, for thirty-two pounds, conveyed the lot to Lt. John Pickering of Salem, yeoman, Nov. 9, 1680.* Mr. Pickering died in May, 1694, having devised this lot to his wife for her life, and at her decease to his son William Pickering. Both the widow and son William Pickering owned the lot for some years after 1700. There was a little strip of salt marsh at the western end of the lot.

John Robinson Lot. This was a part of John Orne's lot in 1679, and he had probably owned it for many years. He apparently conveyed it, between Oct. 8, 1679, and Oct. 30, 1683, to his sons Joseph Horne, cordwainer, and Benjamin Horne, tailor, both of Salem, who, for fifteen pounds and ten shillings, conveyed it to John Robinson of Salem, tailor, on the latter date.† Mr. Robinson owned it for many years.

John Orne Lot. John Orne of Salem, house carpenter, owned this lot Nov. 4, 1684, when, upon his death bed probably, he conveyed it, for love, to his son John Orne of Salem, cordwainer.‡ In the father's will, dated Oct. 8, 1679, and proved Nov. 25, 1684, the lot was also devised to him. John Orne, the son, owned it until 1709.

Thomas Flint Lot. This lot early belonged to Richard Raymond of Salem, mariner, who had moved to Saybrooke, Conn. By attorneys, he conveyed it to his son-in-law Oliver Mannering of Salem, seaman, Oct. 13, 1662.§ Mr. Mannering removed to New London, Conn., and, for fourteen pounds, conveyed the lot to William Flint of Salem, yeoman, April 30, 1667.‖ Mr. Flint died April 2, 1673, possessed of the lot, having devised it to his son Thomas Flint. It was then appraised at thirteen pounds. Quartermaster Thomas Flint owned the lot for many years after 1700.

Miles Ward Lot. This lot was early owned by a Mr. Gott, and by Samuel Cutler in 1662. Capt. James Smith of Marblehead, mariner, owned it in 1667, and conveyed it to William Flint of Salem, husbandman, Sept. 13, 1669.* Mr. Flint died April 2, 1673, having devised this lot to his grandson Joshua Ward. It was then valued at eighteen pounds. Joshua Ward died in 1680, at the age of eleven; and the lot came into the hands or his brother Miles Ward, who owned it for many years after 1700.

Jonathan Ager Lot. This lot early belonged to "old goodman Ager" (or, Augur). This was William Ager of Salem, who died in the spring of 1654, having devised the lot to his son Jonathan Ager. Jonathan Ager owned the lot for many years after 1700.

William Browne Lot. This lot belonged to Samuel Archer very early. He died in December, 1667, possessed of it, and his administrator conveyed it, without the marsh, to William Browne, sr., of Salem, merchant, before Jan. 31, 1669-70, when the latter conveyed it to his son William Browne, jr., of Salem, merchant.† But no deed was passed from the administrator until Sept. 27, 1687, when Samuel Archard of Salem, house carpenter, eldest son of the deceased, gave a deed to William Browne.‡ Mr. Browne owned the lot and apparently the marsh at the southwestern end in 1700.

Estate of John Archer Lot. This lot belonged to Samuel Archer, sr., very early. He died in December, 1667, possessed of it, and it descended to his son John Archer of Salem, who died in the winter of 1693-4, possessed of the premises. His estate owned it until 1703.

William Browne Lot. This lot belonged to Nathaniel Pickman as early as 1669. He died in the autumn of 1684, possessed of this lot, which was then valued at thirty pounds. The administrator of his estate conveyed it to William Browne, jr., of Salem, merchant, April 3, 1686.* Mr. Browne owned it until his death, which occurred in 1716. He had also come into the possession of the marsh at the western end of the lot.

[Rebecca Cantlebery, aged 20 years, deposed that the day my father went to tell John Rouden's wife of her swine that were in his pease, a short time after she came in an insulting manner and bade us prove them to be her swine; whereupon I went and caught one of them and held it by the leg, my father standing by. She took up a stone of two or three pound weight and threw it with such force that if I had not fallen down it might have spoiled me. I heard her call her father rogue, whelp and toad; and when my father was at work in his own ground I have seen her sling stones at him with great violence, and we can no sooner let our cattle out of our yard but she is either hunting them with her dogs or striking them with great sticks.

Thomas Goldthwit* testified that he saw Goody Rowden violently oppose William Canterbury, and she did strike his oxen with a stick in her hand in the common field. Jan. 01, 1657.

Elisabeth Walkut* deposed that she, being sent of an errand to Goodwife Cantlebery, she was abroad in her lot; she told me that her husbond was gone to give Goodwife Rowden notice of her swine that were then in his pease. She, standing upon a tree, called me to her to behold how Goodwife Rouden beat her husband. I saw Goodwife Rouden following Goodman Cantlebery towards the fence with both her hands upon him divers times, thrusting him out her ground and throwing things at him. Sworn 6: 11 mo: 1657, before Wm. Hathorne.*

Hilliard Veren Cler:

THE OLD FARM-HOUSE.

In a little grove of shade trees
Stands a farm-house, brown and old,
With a wealth of vines around it,
Gemmed with flowers of red and gold;
By the path that makes a circle
Of white sand around the lawn,
Grow sweet Timothy and clover,
Rosy as a June-day dawn.

Around its door pale morning-glories,
Jump-up-Johnies, dahlias, pinks,
Cluster—concentrated beauties,
Married by a thousand links;
Links of love, the works of nature's Mystery of handicraft;
Links of glory, through which Argosies of perfume waft.

And the gate that swings before it,
And the fence as white as snow,
Stand on variegated cushions,
Which the sun-fire sets aglow;
Crowning them with many colors—
Yellow, purple, green and blue,
As if rainbows there had fallen,
Melted into rarest dew.

On its roof the greenest mosses
Catch the shadows from the trees;
On its sides red honeysuckles
Make their curtesies to the breeze;
And the ever-nervous willows
Standing near the garden's bound,
Throw a web of shade fantastic
On the clover-mantled ground.

O'er the well an arch of grape-vines,
Formed with heaven's directed care,
Chains the shadows to the water,
Making cool the summer air;
And a tiny church, its steeple
Piercing through a bower of leaves,
Is a sure and sacred refuge
Where the wren her carol weaves.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Vital Records of Lynnfield, Massachusetts, to the end of the year 1849. Salem, Mass., 1907. This is a volume of ninety-eight pages and bound in cloth. It includes all records of births, marriages and deaths in the town records, church records and cemetery inscriptions, and is published under the statute. The price, postpaid, is $1.07. Address the publisher, The Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.

Historical Collections of the Topsfield Historical Society. Volume XI. Topsfield, 1906. This, the eleventh annual volume of historical articles published by the Topsfield Historical Society, contains 184 octavo pages. It is illustrated by portraits of Rev. Daniel Breck, pastor of the church in Topsfield from 1779 to 1788, Mrs. Ellen A. Welch and John A. Gould. The principal articles are entitled The Newburyport and Boston Turnpike, Wildes Genealogy, Localities and Place Names in Topsfield, Early Town Records, Biographical Sketch of Nehemiah Kneeland, Pioneer of Topsfield, Maine, etc.

Historical Manual of the Congregational Church of Topsfield, Massachusetts, 1663-1907. Topsfield, 1907. This church has issued this book of sixty octavo pages as a manual; but it is much more than its title indicates. It gives a historical sketch of the church and its meeting houses and furnishings, its Sunday school, and societies connected with the church. It also contains biographical sketches of the pastors, and history of their residences and parsonages; history and list of invested funds; lists of ministers, deacons, clerks and members; and the various creeds and covenants. It is illustrated with views of its last two edifices, seating of the old meeting house, portraits of its ministers since the Revolution, and the ancient Capen house. The price is 50 cents. Address Leone P. Welch, Topsfield, Mass.

A Porter Pedigree; Being an account of the ancestry and descendants of Samuel and Martha (Perley) Porter of Chester, N. H., who were descendants of John Porter of Salem, Mass., and of Allan Perley of Ipswich, Mass. By Miss Juliet Porter. Worcester, 1907.

This is a book of 161 octavo pages, the result of several years' labor of investigation on the part of Miss Porter who has sought to prove from the records the many statements of biography and genealogy contained in this book. She has done good work, and brought to light and placed in a permanent form much information. The compiler's address is 37 Dean street, Station A, Worcester, Mass., and the price of the book, postpaid, is, in paper covers, $1.25, in cloth, $1.75.

A History of the United States and its People from their Earliest Records to the Present Time. By Elroy McKendree Avery. Volume IV. Cleveland, O., 1908.

In this volume of Dr. Avery's fine History of the United States is told how the shackles of tyranny were beginning to be broken in pre-revolutionary struggles and the colonists were prepared for the hastening grapple. The first chapter treats of events which occurred subsequent to the taking of Louisburg in 1745. Then follows the account of the French and Indian war,—the Braddock Expedition, the campaigns at Crown Point and Niagara, the removal of the Acadians, the campaigns of Oswego and Fort William Henry, the capture of Louisburg, the campaign at Ticonderoga and Fort Frontenac, the fall of Fort Duquesne, the campaigns on lakes Champlain and Ontario, the campaign at Quebec and the battle of the Plains of Abraham, the fall of New France, and the peace that followed. It also contains the history of the Cherokee war, 1759-1763, and of the Pontiac War in 1763 and 1764.

This volume contains the usual index and bibliography of the historical sources of the period covered, and this addition is one of the best features of the work, as it enables the reader or the student to continue his reading or investigations on any of the subjects covered by the respective volumes without searching here and there for proper sources of information.

This is in keeping with the plan of the previous volumes in binding, paper, type and illustration. The typographical execution of the work is unexcelled, and the number of engravings is greater than in the volumes previously issued. The beauty of the cuts, many of them being in several colors, is fully equal to those previously presented. The frontispiece is a portrait of Benjamin Franklin. Other portraits given are of Rev. Thomas Prince, Gov. Benning Wentworth, James Edward Oglethorpe, Gov. Robert Dinwiddie, Lawrence Washington, Sir Peter Halket, William Johnson, Robert Monckton, Gen. John Winslow, Thomas Pownall, Robert Rogers, William Pitt, Sir Jeffrey Amherst, Admiral Edward Boscawen, Henry Bouquet, Gen. James Wolfe, Sir Charles Saunders, Gen. George Townshend, George III., etc. There are many autographs, and photographic copies of letters, title pages, bills of currency, coat armor, seals, buildings, newspaper headings, views of places and forts, monuments, soldiers' uniforms in colors, vessels, medals, and many maps, reproduced in their original colors.

There are three hundred and seventy-six pages, all of which consist of valuable historical matter logically and interestingly presented. The publishers are The Burrows Brothers Company, Cleveland, O.

SALEM IN 1700. NO. 32.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on page 114 represents that part of Salem lying south of the junction of Lafayette street and Clifton avenue to a point just south of the State Normal School building, and between the harbor and the marsh lying westerly of Broadway. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of four hundred and fifty feet to an inch. There were no houses standing on this territory in 1700.

The brace marked "a" shows where West avenue runs, and that marked "b" where the new road to Marblehead was laid out in 1737. It was located by the court of general sessions Nov. 15, 1736, and the laying out was confirmed by the court July 26, 1737. The road was occasioned, primarily, by the building of the mill at Forest river two years previously. At this section it was located substantially within the present limits of Lafayette street. It was called the new road to Marblehead in 1755; Fayette street in 1840; and Lafayette street since 1849.

Loring avenue, which is shown on the map as "Highway to Marblehead," was the old way to Marblehead, having been laid out in 1666, as described in No. 29. It was called the highway as it goes toward Marblehead in 1676; highway to Marblehead, 1713; ye country road leading to Marblehead, 1719; ye road leading through South field to Marblehead, 1734; the old road so called to Marblehead, 1773; the road leading to Forest river bridge so called and Salem hospital, 1777; and Loring avenue since 1881, the name having then been changed from Lynn road, which it had been called for many years.

That part of the water lying easterly of the premises was called ye harbor in 1658; the South harbor, 1666; ye water or harbor, 1669; Salem harbor, 1686; ye harbor or salt water, 1696; and has been known since that time generally as Salem harbor. That part of the water lying southerly of the territory was called Forest river as early as 1666; ye water or harbor, 1669; the river, 1692; ye sea or salt water, 1708; Salem harbor, 1812; and the harbor, 1829.

Sarah Williams Lot. Thomas Browning of Salem owned this lot as early as 1658, and died, possessed of it, in the spring of 1671, having devised it to his daughters Sarah, wife of Joseph Williams, and Deborah, wife of Isaac Meachum. A division of the real estate of the deceased was made 17 : 2 : 1675, and this lot was released to Mrs. Williams.* She owned the lot until after 1700.

John Pickering Lot. This lot belonged to John Talby before 1653 and to Richard More of Salem, mariner, in that year. For six pounds, Mr. More conveyed it to William Flint of Salem, husbandman, 21 : 7 : 1658.† Mr. Flint conveyed the lot to Lt. John Pickering of Salem, yeoman, Dec. 1, 1671.† Mr. Pickering died in May, 1694, having devised the lot to his son Benjamin, who was a shipwright and resident of Salem. For twenty pounds, he conveyed the lot to John Pickering of Salem, yeoman, April 18, 1698;‡ and John Pickering owned it in 1700.

Edward Flint Lot. The northerly half of this lot, above the dashes, early belonged to John Browne, and he conveyed it to Henry Harwood of Salem before 1658.

The southerly half of the lot was in the possession of Henry Harwood ("Har-rod") 27 : 12 : 1659, when Benjamin Felton claimed it.* "John Bourne of the Barbadoes" conveyed it, to Mr. Harwood March 29, 1661.†

William Flint owned the whole lot in 1669; and died 2 : 2 : 1673, having devised his real estate to his sons Edward and Thomas. They made a division of the land Dec. 3, 1694, and this part became the property of Edward Flint,‡ who owned it in 1700.

John Pickering Lot. This was a part of Jeggles' point, and belonged to William Jeggles, who died, possessed of it in 1659, intestate. The county court assigned the estate to his widow who owned it after him. It next belonged to John Becket, who conveyed it to Mr. William Browne, sr., of Salem, merchant, before Dec. 10, 1666, when the latter conveyed it to William Flint of Salem, yeoman.§ For twelve pounds and ten shillings, Mr. Flint conveyed it to John Pickering of Salem, yeoman, Feb. 28, 1669.‖ Mr. Pickering died in 1694, having, in his will, devised this lot to his son John Pickering, who owned it until after 1700. This was then known as the old pasture, and is now the Forest River park.

Edward Flint Lot. This lot was a part of the original lot of William Jeggles, who died in 1659, intestate. The county court assigned it to his widow. It next belonged to John Becket, who conveyed it to William Browne, sr., of Salem, merchant, before Dec. 10, 1666, when the latter conveyed it to William Flint of Salem, yeoman.§ Mr. Flint died 2 : 2 : 1673, having devised his real estate to his sons Edward and Thomas. They made a division of the land Dec. 3, 1694, and this part became the property of Edward Flint,‡ who owned it in 1700.

The spring on this lot is mentioned as early as 1666; and was known as Jeggles' (Giggles') spring in 1716.

Alice Pickering Lot. This was a part of the original Elias Mason lot, and it was owned by Alice Flint, widow of William Flint of Salem, Aug. 22, 1696, when she conveyed it to her daughter Alice Pickering.* Mrs. Pickering owned it in 1700.

John Robinson Lot. This was a part of the original Elias Mason lot. It belonged to John Robinson as early as 1692, and he owned it in 1700.

Jury for trials: Lt. Samuell Appleton, Serg. Jer: Belcher, William Addams, Jacob Perkins, Reginall ffoster, Thomas Smith, Henry Short, Will Chandlour, Phillip Nelson, William Stickney, John Dressour and Tho: Dorman.

John Hull, returned by constable of Newbury to serve on jury for trials, not appearing, fined 10 shillings, which was afterward remitted upon his petition.

Henry Short, administrator of Mr. Henry Sewall, ordered to pay witnesses in Mr. Sewall's presentment.

Humphry Griffen v. Symon Tompson. Debt.

William Deane v. Mr. Jonathan Wade. Case, for prosecuting him after the manner of a runaway, the plaintiff being free. Verdict for plaintiff. [Writ: William Deanies v. Jonathan Wade, sr., dated March 22, 1657; by the court, Robert Lord. Served by attachment of steers, by Edmund Browne, marshall of Ipswich, March 23, 1657.

Ezekiel Cheever testified that William Denies came to my house, spoke about reports of Mr. Wade's selling deer; William spoke much in Mr. Wade, his master's, behalf and defence, alleging sundry reasons; he said he saw not how his master could afford things cheaper. His wife testified the same. Sworn in court 30: 1: 1658.

Ellin Cheever testified that coming with Mr. Bartholomew and Mrs. Wade from Mr. Bartholomew's house, Mr. Wade told Mr. Bartholomew what a great mercy she had in having such a servant in her house in her husband's absence, how ready and forward he was in that which was good, in asking her children questions out of ye scriptures and herself also; which she thought was to see if he could pose her; and Mr. Bartholomew made answer again, wishing her by all means to encourage him.

Johathan Wade of Ipswich appointed his son Jonathan Wade his attorney Dec. 3, 1655. Witnesses: Samuel Symonds* and the mark of Humfry Gryffyn.

Susanna Wade testified that there falling some difference between William Deines and Jonathan Wade, jr., in the absence of his father about the time of his service with Mr. Wade, that there was an agreement that William serve two years more, making six years in all. Signed by Susanna Wade* and William Deines*. Witnesses: William Goodhue and Jonathan Wade, jr.

Ralf Dix spoke to William Goodhue about Wm. Deines, and testified that William Deines was charged to lodge out of his master's house whole nights and I found him lodging in the barn, wrapped with a blanket, several times. Sworn in court 30: 1: 1658.

Mrs. Wade and Jonathan Wade, jr., bought and sold great quantities of goods of several kinds.

William Goodhue and Richard Ayoels, testified that William Deines performed his service faithfully, especially since his master went into England. Sworn in court 30: 1: 1657.

John Fuler and Thomas Burnham testified that William Deines was a faithful servant, and that his master commanded him.

Jonathan Wade, jr., reproved William Deines for not putting the doors fast about the English and Indian corn in the barn, by which many swine and some cattle were in the barn in the morning which did much harm. He wished John Wigins to fetch the constable to quit William Deines, but the constable was not at home. So Jonathan Wade went into the house and the servant followed him. Jonathan had his cane in his hand to go abroad. William Deines stood by the door and took hold of the cane with one hand, and with the other took an axe, and held it up against his head or face, with the edge as if he would immediately strike. Jonathan asked him to let the cane go. He replied that he would not. Jonathan twisted it out of his hand, and told William to go about his business. William replied that he would not be commanded by him. Sworn in court at Ipswich March 30, 1658.

Samuel Hunt deposed that he occasionally worked with William Deines, and found him faithful, etc. Sworn 30: 1: 1658.

Mrs. Susanna Wade told William Deans she could not bear sometimes what he did. He shook his head and knocked his fists together at her, and followed her, saying: "O, fy upon the woman, base liar. O fy, upon the woman, thou art a base liar. I will not regard a word thou sayest. . . Thou went to defraud and slander," etc. Witnesses: Prudence and Sary Wade. Sworn by the two witnesses in court at Ipswich March 30, 1658.

Prudence Wade deposed that she heard Deacon Goodhue say to her father that he had no cause to be glad with his son about the making of the writing for he was first to put his hand to it, by persuasion.

Sary Wade deposed that she was present when the writing about William Deines was made by Deacon Goodhue, and her brother said it was of no use. —Files.]

THE OLD-TIME GROCERY STORE.

The world may prize its concerts, its theatres and balls,
Its vaudeville amusements in Keith's palatial halls,
I remember with affection a place that is no more,
That place of evening jollity, the old-time grocery store.

I buy my modest provender of a grocer slim and spry
And the only folks who're welcome are the folks who come to buy.
The stove that was the focus when the evenings had grown chill
Is junk, and where it used to stand they've got a coffee mill.

The checker board is laid away and dust is on its top
A sign upon the wall remarks "No Loafing in this Shop."
There's a ring of friendly faces that will never circle more
And the glory has departed of the old-time grocery store.

How memory still recalls them, those good old social days
When the regulars had all gathered about that friendly blaze
And the elders led the conclave from that sacred inner row
With their venerable whiskers waving dignified and slow.

In boyhood's bright ambition, there was formed a vision fair
Of the time when, as an elder, I should take an inner chair,
And be profound in argument, and scathing in debate,
And skilful in anathema, and in prophecy have weight.

HON. SAMUEL PHILLIPS.

Hon. Samuel Phillips was son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Barnard) Phillips of Andover, where he was born Feb. 5, 1752, the youngest but one of seven children, and the only one that lived to adult age. His father was a merchant, conducting a country store at the house in which Samuel was born, and to which the family removed, only two or three weeks before Samuel's birth, from their old house. The new home had just been completed.

Amid rural scenes, quiet, industry and thrift the boyhood of young Phillips was passed. He was gentle, amiable and active. He was fond of books, and it was early decided to give him a liberal education. When he became twelve years of age he was the only surviving child in the family. Without playmates and companions of his own age, he grew sedate, orderly and studious, and his real boy life was soon over. Otherwise, he might have been more robust and his life more joyous.

At the age of thirteen, in the spring of 1765, he entered Dummer academy, at Byfield, where he fitted for college. Here he was proficient in his studies, manly, sober and systematic in all things. His health, however, was not good.

At the age of fifteen, he entered Harvard college; and graduated in 1771. He was diligent in his studies, though slow to learn, and had a good memory.

He married Miss Phebe Foxcroft in 1773, she being nine years his senior, and took up his residence in his native town. In that spring he was chosen town clerk and treasurer, in place of his father, who had filled both offices for the previous fourteen years.

Early in 1774, he was appointed by the town chairman of a committee to draft a series of resolutions on the public affairs of the time; and subsequently served on other similar committees. At the age of twenty-three, in 1775, he was the Andover representative to the provincial congress. He became one of its best speakers, clear, concise, logical, direct and nervous, but never light, fanciful or rhetorical; and served on many of the committees, with such men as Samuel Adams and John Hancock. He served on several committees appointed to confer with General Washington in reference to the war; to countersign the colony notes issued by the continental congress and the notes of the receiver-general, to direct the mustering and paying militia companies, to superintend the delivery of powder to the several towns and to the commissary-general, to view the defences of Boston harbor, report their condition, etc.

While a member of the provincial congress in the winter of 1775-6, he erected at great expense, a powder mill for the aid of the colonies, with their cooperation, and in May began to deliver considerable quantities of the necessary powder from week to week. This was, at the time, the leading manufactory of powder in the province.

He was one of the four delegates chosen by the town of Andover to the constitutional convention of 1779-1780; and was one of the committee to frame it. He was chosen the first state senator from his district; and the next year (1781) was appointed to the bench of the court of common pleas for Essex county, though he was only twenty-nine years of age. He began his judicial service at Newburyport Sept. 25, 1781; and ended it in April, 1798. Doctor Tappan, in his funeral sermon on the death of Judge Phillips, said that "his wisdom, justice, and patriotism, were for a long time exercised in one of our judiciary departments; in which his ability and integrity, his patient, candid, and diligent attention, were universally approved." The reason for his resignation from the bench was his ill health brought about by too close confinement to his official duties, on the bench and in the senate, for he was continuously elected to the senate after his first election in 1780. He became its president in 1785; and continued to be elected president, unanimously, for fifteen years, being regarded as the father of the senate.

At the state election in April, 1801, Judge Phillips was chosen lieutenant-governor as the nominee of the Federalists; and held that office at the time of his death.

In 1777, Mr. Phillips had moved to the South parish of Andover; and there erected a fine large house in 1785, at which Washington was a guest in his New England tour in 1789.

There was an inherited love of learning in the Phillips' family; and Judge Phillips gave his support to all schools, both public and private, in the town. He finally projected the plan for the academy which since that time has flourished in his parish and called by his name.

He was not only its projector but chief patron. The establishment of this institution was the favorite work of his life.

He persuaded his father and uncle to endow the school as joint founders. They had both been teachers, and gradually became interested in the plan, finally consenting to it. It was at first designed as a private school, under his personal supervision; and the entire endowment, lands, buildings and funds was to be made over to him alone in trust; and the founders with seven others were to be trustees. This was in 1777, before he had removed to the South parish, and a suitable site was sought in the North parish near his own and his father's home. In January, of that year, the first purchase of land for the academy was made, but in the South parish. The second tract, bought in March following, had upon it an old house, and to this house Mr. Phillips removed from his home in the North parish.

An old carpenter's shop on the first lot of land purchased was immediately fitted up for a schoolhouse. It was one-story high, thirty-five feet long and twenty wide, and would accommodate thirty or forty scholars. It stood on the corner of Main and Phillips streets. The school was opened in 1778. A new building was opened in 1786.

As his years glided away, with increasing debility, Judge Phillips seemed to redouble his activity. His chronic asthma was ominous of consumption. He preferred to live fast rather than long; to work while it was today. In the summer of 1801, his health was very poor; and he died, at his home in Andover, Feb. 10, 1802, at fifty years of age. His funeral was largely attended by prominent men of Massachusetts and New Hampshire. He met death as he ever met his duty, with Christian hope and faith. His loss was deplored and lamented. He had been one of the sterling able patriots of his time,—a time which seemed to produce an unprecedented number of great men of character, ability, activity and reputation.

A Sketch of Abel Huse, the first of the name in America and ancestor of all the Huses in this country. By Isaac Huse. Manchester, N. H., 1907. Mr. Isaac Huse of Manchester, N. H., has compiled and printed this valuable monograph of twenty pages. It is a plain compilation of facts in detail taken from original sources, and is closely printed in small type. A copy will be sent to anyone on receipt of fifty cents by the author.

George Morton of Plymouth Colony and some of his Descendants. By John K. Allen. Chicago, Ill., 1908. This is a pamphlet of forty-six large octavo pages; and is an exhaustive account of this prominent pioneer, the father of the author of "New England's Memorial". The work is well done, and contains a great amount of important imformation. There is an index to the surnames. The book has been printed for private circulation.

Vital Records of Saugus, Massachusetts, to the end of the year 1849. Salem, Mass., 1907. This is a book, bound in cloth, containing eighty-one octavo pages. It includes all records of births, marriages, and deaths in the town records, church records, cemetery inscriptions and bibles, and is published under the provisions of the statute. The price, postage prepaid, is 90 cents. Address the publisher, The Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.

Historical Collections of the Topsfield Historical Society. Volume XII. Topsfield, Mass., 1907. This volume of the valuable historical collections of the Topsfield society contains one hundred and fifty-two pages. It includes the funeral sermon on the death of Rev. Joseph Capen preached by Rev. Joseph Green of Salem Village, and the Elegy on the death of Mr. Green written by Rev. Nicholas Noyes; an account of the streets and ways of the town; biography of Jacob Kimball; descendants of John Redington; etc. The one illustration is a half-tone reproduction of the title-page of the sermon of Mr. Green on the death of Mr. Capen.

The Massachusetts Magazine. Volume I., Number 1. Salem, Mass., January, 1908. The Salem Press Co., Salem, Mass., has begun the publication of a new magazine. The first number for January, of the current year, contains sixty pages of text and several inserted plates of old houses, etc., artistically printed and mounted. The cover is illustrated with a half-tone cut of the poet Whittier. The entire number is attractively arranged and printed.

It is to be published quarterly and be devoted to history, genealogy and biography, the editor being Rev. Thomas Franklin Waters of Ipswich, president of the Ipswich Historical Society.

This initial number has for its leading article, "Whittier, the Poet, as Historian," by the editor. This is followed by an article on "Whittier's Birthplace" by Alice May Douglass from Current Events Magazine; The Organization of the American Army at the Siege of Boston, in 1775; and Col. John Glover's Marblehead Regiment by Frank A. Gardner, M. D., an associate editor. This last is the first of a series of articles on the Massachusetts regiments in the Revolution, and is most valuable. Then follow articles on the John Adams Homestead; The Old Fairbanks House at Dedham by Mrs. Lillie B. Titus; The Founders of the Massachusetts Bay Colony by Doctor Gardner, being a paper read at a meeting of The Old Planters Society; The Manning Homestead by William H. Manning; etc.

This magazine is intended to be the official organ of several of the colonial societies.

The annual subscription price is $2.50, and single numbers 75 cents. Address The Salem Press Co., Salem, Mass.

LEGAL QUALIFICATIONS OF VOTERS IN MASSACHUSETTS.

IN the charter granted, March 4, 1628, by King Charles I to John Humphrey, John Endecott, Sir Richard Saltonstal, Matthew Cradock, Richard Bellingham, John Browne, Samuel Browne and their associates, "and all such others as shall hereafter be admitted and made free of the Colony and Society hereafter mencoed, shall, from tyme to tyme, and at all tymes for ever hereafter, be . . one body corporate and politique in fact and name, by the name of the Governor and Company of the Mattachusetts Bay in Newe England: . . and graunte, That, from henceforth for ever, there shalbe one Governor, one Deputy Governor, and eighteene Assistants of the same Company, to be from tyme to tyme constituted, elected, and chosen out of the freemen of the saide Company, for the tyme being, in such manner and forme as hereafter in theis presents is expressed. . . And . . wee . . constitute . . Mathew Cradocke to be the first and present Governor . . Thomas Goffe to be Deputy Governor . . and Sir Richard Saltonstall . . John Endecott, . . John Browne . . [and others named] to be the present Assistants . . the Governor or Deputie Governor and six of the Assistants, . . shall have full power and authoritie to choose, nominate, and appointe such and soe many others as they shall thinke fitt, and that shall be willing to accept the same, to be free of the said Company and Body, and them into the same to admitt."

Accordingly, the original associates chose, from time to time, various persons as freemen, and early fixed upon certain qualifications and the form of an oath. The following is a copy of the original oath:—

"I, A, B, &c, being, by the Almighties most wise disposicon, become a memb^{r} of this body, consisting of the Goun^{r}, Deputy Goun^{r}, Assistants, and a com^{n}lty of the Mattachusets in Newe England, doe freely & sincerely acknowledge that I am iustly & lawfully subiect to the goum^{t} of the same, & doe accordingly submitt my pson & estate to be ptected, ordered, & gouned by the lawes & constitucons thereof, & doe faithfully pmise to be from time to time obedient & conformable therevnto, & to the authie of the said Goun^{r} & Assistants & their succes^{r}s, & to all such lawes, orders, sentences, & decrees as shalbe lawfully made & published by them or their successors; and I will alwaies indeav^{r} (as in duty I am bound) to advance the peace & wellfaire of this bodie or comonwealth to my vtmost skill & abilitie; & I will, to my best power and meanes, seeke to devert & prevent whatsoeuer may tend to the inyne or damage thereof, or of any of the said Goun^{r}, Deputy Goun^{r}, or Assistants, or any of them, or their succes^{r}s, and will giue speedy notice to them, or some of them, of any sedicon, violence, treachery, or other hurt or euill which I shall knowe, heare, or vehem^{t}ly suspecte to be plotted or intended against the said comonwealth, or the said goum^{t} established; and I will not att any time suffer or giue consent to any counsell or any attempt that shalbe [done,] given, or attempted for the impeachm^{t} of the said goum^{t}, or makeing any change or alteracon of the same, contrary to the lawes & ordinances thereof, but shall doe my vtmost endeavr to discover, oppose, & hinder all & euy such counsell & attempt. Soe helpe me God."*

May 14, 1634, the form of the oath was revised, the following being agreed upon :—

"I, A, B, &c, being by Gods pvidence an inhabitant & ffreeman within the jurisdiccon of this comon weale, doe ffreely acknowledge my selfe to be subiect to the goument thereof, & therefore doe here sweare by the greate and dreadfull name of the euer lyueing God that I wilbe true & faithful to the same, & will accordingly yeild assistance & support therevnto, with my pson & estate, as in equitie I am bound, & will also truely indeavr to mayntaine & preserue all the liberties & previlidges thereof, submitting my selfe to the wholesome lawes made & established by the same; and further, that I will not plott nor practise any euill against it, nor consent to any that shall soe doe, but will tymely discouer & reveale the same to lawfull aucthority nowe here established for the speedy preventing thereof. Moreouer, I doe solemnly bind my selfe in the sight of God, that when I shalbe called to giue my voyce touching any such matter of this state, wherein ffreemen are to deale, I will giue my vote & suffrage as I shall in my owne conscience iudge best to conduce & tend to the publique weale of the body, without respect of psons or favr of any man Soe helpe mee God in the Lord Jesus Christ."†

May 18, 1631, the general court, "to the end the body of the comons may be pserved of honest & good men, it was likewise ordered and agreed that for time to come noe man shalbe admitted to the freedome of this body polliticke, but such as are members of some of the churches within the lymitts of the same."‡

At first, under the charter, the associates chose freemen, but, May 14, 1634, the general court voted "that none but the Gen'all Court hath power to chuse and admitt ffreemen."†

The age limit was extended to sixteen years, except for the election of magistrates, March 4, 1634-5, when the general court "ordered, that the ffreemens oath shalbe gyven to euy man of or above the age of 16 years, the clause for eleccon of magistrates onely excepted."‡

Men in the settlements were not strongly desirous of becoming freemen, and with that position to assume the obligations of citizenship. It was easier to receive the benefits of the government without the bounden duty to the commonwealth, than to perform and be responsible for the oft-times onerous duties of office-holding, as many still think. To emphasize the law that no one but freemen had the right of suffrage, the general court, Sept. 3, 1635, "ordered, that none but ffreemen shall haue any vote in any towne, in any accon of aucthoritie, or necessity, or that which belongs to them by vertue of their ffreedome, as receaveing inhabitants, & layeing out of lots," etc.§

Several years went by and still men were slow to become freemen. May 10, 1643, the general court "ordered, concerning members that refuse to take their freedom, the churches should bee writ unto, to deale wth them."‖

Freemen were needed everywhere for jury duties, and in every town to serve as town officials; and the authorities were compelled to extend a limited right of suffrage to many who were not freemen.

May 26, 1647, the general court, "taking into consideration y^e^ usefull ptes & abilities of div^rs^ inhabitants amongst us, w^ch^ are not freemen, w^ch^ if impved to publike vse, y^e^ affaires of this comon wealth may be y^e^ easier carried an end, in y^e^ several townes of this iurisdiction, doth hereby declare y^t^ henceforth it shall & may be lawfull for y^e^ freemen w^thin^ any of y^e^ said townes to make choyce of such inhabitants, though non freemen, who have taken or shall take y^e^ oath of fidelity to this goverm^t^ to be iury men, & to have their vote in y^e^ choyce of y^e^ select men for towne affaires, asseasm^t^ of rates, & other prudentials pp to y^e^ select men of y^e^ severall townes, pvided still y^t^ y^e^ maior pt of all companies (of selectmen be freemen) from time to time y^t^ shall make any valide act, as also where no select men are to have their vote in ord^r^ing of schooles, hearding of cattle, laying out of high wayes, & distributing of lands, any law, usage, or custome to y^e^ contrary notw^th^standing; pvided, also, y^t^ no non freeman shall have his vote untill he have attained y^e^ age of 24 yeares; pvided, also, y^t^ none y^t^ are or shalbe detected & convicted in any Co^r^te of any evill carriage against the goverm^t^, or comonwealth, or churches, (it being intended to be imediately done,) shalbe capable to vote untill y^e^ Co^r^te where he was convicted or sentenced hath restored him to his former liberty."*

Nov. 11, 1647, "There being w^th^in this iurisdiction many memb^rs^ of churches, who, to exempt y^ur^selues fro^m^ all publike service in y^e^ comon wealth, will not come in to be made freemen," it was therefore ordered by the general court, "y^t^ all such memb^rs^ of churches in y^e^ sev^r^all townes w^th^in this iurisdiction shall not be exempted from such publike service as they are chosen to by y^e^ freemen to y^e^ sev^r^all townes, as cunstables, iurers, selectmen, & survey^r^s of high wayes; & if any pson shall refuse to serve such office, he shall pay for ev^r^y such refusall, being legally chosen thereunto, such fine as y^e^ towne shall impose, not exceed^s^ 20^s^, as freemen are liable unto in such cases."*

May 26, 1658, the general court repealed the above two laws "& inacted, that for time to come all Englishmen that are setled inhabitants & house holders in any toune of the age of twenty fower years, & of honest & good conuersation, being rated at twenty pounds estate in a single countrje rate, that hath taken the oath of fidellitje to this government, & no other, except freemen, maybe chosen jury men or connstables, and haue theire vote in the chojce of the select men for the toune affaires, assessments of rates, & other prudentialls propper to the select men of the seuerall tounes, provided still that the majo^r^ part of all companjes of selectmen be freemen from tjme to tjme that shall make a valjd act, as also where no selectmen are to haue theire vote in ordering of schooles, hearding of catle, laying out of highways, & distributing of lands, any lawe, vse, or custome to the contrary notw^th^standing, & the former lawes, so farre as they relate to the liberty of such as are non ffreemen, are hereby repealed."†

May 31, 1660, the general court declared that freemen must be members of some church of Christ, and in full communion.‡

From the first, the intention of the legislators in making and interpreting the law was directed to keeping the government within the control of the Congregational church. This of course effected the exclusion of the Episcopalians. When the Commonwealth terminated and Charles II came to the throne, his Episcopalian friends in Massachusetts Bay Colony sought his assistance to enable them to secure the right of suffrage to themselves. Accordingly, June 28, 1662, the king sent a letter to the colony asking that the letter and construction of the law be modified. Apparently, little attention was paid to this letter, and nothing was positively done about it until Aug. 3, 1664, when the general court repealed the existing law that made it necessary that freemen be members of some church; and in its place ordered "that from henceforth all Englishmen presenting a certifficat, vnder the hands of the ministers or minister of the place where they dwell, that they are orthodox in religion; & not vitious in theire liues, and also a certifficat, vnder the hands of the selectmen of the place, or of the major part of them, that they are freeholders, & are for their oune proper estate (wthout heads of psons) rateable to the country in a single country rate, after the vsual manner of valluation, in the place where they liue, to be full value of tenne shillings,* or that they are in full communion wth some church amongst vs, it shallbe in the liberty of all & euery such person or persons, being twenty fower yeares of age, householders and setled inhabitants in this jurisdiccion, from tjme to tjme, to present themselves & their desires to this Court for their admittance to the freedome of this comonwealth, and shallbe the priuiledge to have such their desire propounded & put to vote in the General Court for acceptance to the freedome of the body polliticke by the sufferage of the major pte, according to the rules of our pattent."†

His majesty's commissioners feared that the passage of this law would offend the king;‡ but the authorities here responded by stating that the colony stood upon its charter rights.* This is the last that is apparent on the records relating to the matter of suffrage in this colony, except the recall of the charter a score of years later.

Oct. 19, 1664, the general court ordered that, for convenience, the county courts may administer the oath of freedom to all persons approved of by the general court.†

A change in the character of suffrage seems to have begun at the time at which the king interposed in behalf of his Episcopalian friends. Until that time the government and nature of the colony was like that of a business corporation. By the enforced broadening of the right of suffrage, it came to have the character of a political government, where every inhabitant of sufficient ability had a right as such inhabitant to suffrage. Whether the reason of the change lay in the interposition of the king or not is not known. It was, probably, however, the natural outcome of the situation. In spite of the restricted character of the practical methods of government at first adopted in regard to their successors, other and broader views of the leaders of the colony were evolved. The truth was that they were instituting a democratic government, and suffrage therefore must be inevitably as extensive as the inhabitants, who were capable of exercising the right of suffrage. The reason for requiring qualification is to secure the people from the power of persons who have not sufficient will and interest. Slaves, persons under guardianship, infants, and, in earlier times than ours, paupers and women, were deemed either to have no will of their own or to be so much under the influence of others that they could not exercise it independently.

In early English times the government was in the hands of the landed proprietors; but in the passing of the centuries it became apparent that such a course was inconsistent with general welfare. On general principles of liberty, the poor man as well as the rich should have the right of suffrage, for to the voters is committed, to a great extent, not only the disposal of property, but of liberty and life.

We have seen that religion had entered into qualification, but only as a precaution, and had been abandoned. Also, that a property qualification had been begun. It early became law in England that suffrage should extend to all male freeholders, above twenty-one years of age, who were not guilty of perjury or subornation of perjury. Such was the law of England when the charter of the Province of Massachusetts Bay was received. All through both colonial and provincial periods, this right of suffrage was somewhat guarded by the government supervision of new inhabitants.

The charter of the province provided that no freeholder or other person shall have a vote in the election of members of the general court, unless he has "an estate of Freehold in Land within Our said Province or Territory to the value of Forty Shillings per Annu at the least or other estate to the value of Forty pounds Sterl'."

Immediately following the institution of the provincial government, in 1692-3, the general court enacted a law that freeholders and other inhabitants of each town who are rateable at twenty pounds estate, to one single rate besides the poll, may vote for town officers.*

In 1735, the general court voted that "No person shall be deemed qualified or be admitted to vote in the choice of officers, or in the other affairs to be transacted at any meeting of the town, precinct or parish where he dwells, but such only who have a rateable estate in such town or district (besides the poll) amounting to the value of twenty pounds."† But, for the choice of representatives any person may vote who is qualified "according to the royal charter."* This act was to continue for three years,† and it was renewed repeatedly until 1775."‡

The state constitution provided that state senators and representatives should be elected by the vote of male inhabitants in their respective districts, of twenty-one years of age and upwards, having a freehold estate within the commonwealth, "of the annual income of three pounds, or any estate of the value of sixty pounds,"§ and in case of a representative election a voter must have a freehold estate of that value within the town of which he was a resident.‖

Feb. 20, 1782, the general court enacted a law that every person who is an inhabitant within any town who shall pay to one single tax, besides the poll or polls, a sum equal to two-thirds of a single poll tax, shall be entitled to all the privileges of voting in town affairs.

By an act of the general court passed March 7, 1801, voters must be duly registered before they can vote. This has been the law ever since that time.

By an amendment of the constitution, numbered three, which was ratified by the people April 9, 1821, paupers¶ and persons under guardianship were denied the right to vote for governor, lieutenant governor, senators or representatives, and it also provided that in order to vote in such elections voters must be citizens and have resided in the commonwealth one year, and within the town or district, in which they shall claim a right to vote, six calendar months next preceding any such election;* also, they must have paid, by themselves or their parents, masters or guardians a state or county tax, which, within two years next preceding such election, was assessed upon them, in any town or district of the state, unless he was by law exempt from taxation. The provision requiring the possession of a freehold of the annual income of three pounds or of any estate of the value of sixty pounds was annulled.

The qualifications as fixed by this amendment were by chapter 104, section 1, of the Acts of 1823, made applicable to all voters in elections of representatives to congress and state, county and municipal offices, and in all meetings of municipalities; † and by Acts of 1832, chapter 169, section 1, to elections for electors of president and vice president of the United States.

By amendment to the state constitution numbered twenty, which was ratified by the people May 1, 1857, provided that a voter must "be able to read the constitution in the English language and write his name: provided, however, that the provisions of this amendment shall not apply to any person prevented by a physical disability from complying with its requisitions, nor to any person who now has the right to vote, nor to any persons who shall be sixty years of age or upwards at the time" the amendment took effect.

The twenty-third amendment of the state constitution, ratified by the people May 9, 1859, provided that "No person of foreign birth shall be entitled to vote . . unless he shall have resided within the jurisdiction of the United States for two years subsequent to his naturalization, and shall be otherwise qualified, according to the constitution and laws of this commonwealth: provided, that this amendment shall not affect the rights which any person of foreign birth possessed at the time of the adoption thereof; and, provided, further, that it shall not effect the rights of any child of a citizen of the United States, born during the temporary absence of the parent therefrom." The amendment was repealed by amendment twenty-six, which was ratified by the people April 6, 1863.

The twenty-eighth amendment of the state constitution, ratified by the people Nov. 8, 1881, provided that "No person having served in the army or navy of the United States in time of war, and having been honorably discharged from such service, if otherwise qualified to vote, shall be disqualified therefor on account of being a pauper; or, if a pauper, because of the non-payment of a poll tax." This amendment was superseded by amendment thirty-one, which was ratified by the people Nov. 4, 1890. The new amendment is the same except that the word "pauper" is eliminated and in its place is the following: "receiving or having received aid from any city or town."

The provision of the third amendment of the constitution, requiring the payment of a tax, as a qualification for voting, was annulled by amendment thirty-two, which was ratified by the people Nov. 3, 1891. The assessment is still necessary, however.

Because of the change in reference to coverture of married women, enlarging their rights and making them more independent of their husbands, and the demand for the right of suffrage, the legislature of Massachusetts, in 1879, passed an act granting to women the right to vote for school committee.* It provided that "Every woman who is a citizen of this commonwealth, of twenty-one years of age and upwards, and has the educational qualifications required by the twentieth article of the amendments to the constitution, excepting paupers and persons under guardianship, who shall have resided within this commonwealth one year and within the city or town in which she claims the right to vote six months next preceding any meeting of citizens either in wards or in general meeting for municipal purposes, and who shall have paid by herself, or her parent, or guardian, a state, or county tax, which within two years next preceding such meeting has been assessed upon her in any city or town, shall have a right to vote, at such town or city meeting, for members of school committees." Acts of 1881, chapter 191, section 1, added that such woman's tax may be paid by her trustee and that it may also be a city or town tax, and that it may be assessed upon her trustee. Section 2 of the last-mentioned act fixes the poll tax of women at a sum not exceeding fifty cents, and section three provides that they must be registered on a list of voters separate from the list of male voters.

HAVERHILL INSCRIPTIONS.

WALNUT CEMETERY.

Walnut cemetery, in the East parish of Haverhill, where repose so many of the early inhabitants who were closely identified with its settlement, is a beautiful spot on the so called middle road, not far from Whittier's birthplace and the old Congregational church.

The history of this old burying ground dates back one hundred and sixty years, and in the quiet enclosure generations sleep their long last sleep, and families who were neighbors in life dwell side by side in peaceful harmony in the quiet spot so dear to them.

Chase's History of Haverhill gives the date of 1748 as the year in which the yard was laid out, and this is doubtless authentic, for an examination of the old parish book reveals the following entry :—

"March 29 1747-8 at the Leagul town meeting of East Parish, it was voted to see if Parrish will chuse a committee to find out and Procure a bhurying place for sd Parrish."

At the same meeting, Jacob Chase, Nathaniel Peaslee, and Jonathan Marsh were chosen for the above committee.

At the town meeting held in the parish November 7, 1748, the committee chosen on the preceding March reported "that considering the hardness of digging in other places, the most suitable and convenient place is by the Country road, between Jonathan Marshe's barn, and a place called Gravel Shoot, where ye highway that leads from the G. Pond, joyns ye Country Road."

As Jonathan Marsh resided on what is now the old Nichols homestead, the location of the yard is clearly defined.

Tradition has handed down the statement that the original yard was given the parish by a Peaslee, and it is possible the above mentioned Nathaniel Peaslee was the donor.

In this plot, scarcely half an acre in size, members of the parish could bury at will, each one being allowed to determine the locality.

The oldest stone in the burying ground, now moss covered and almost illegible, is that of Moses Grele, dated in 1750.

Tradition states that more than a century ago many East Parish residents became victims to the dreaded small pox, and were laid to rest in this old burying ground, thus stopping interments there for years.

From time to time the yard has been enlarged, and in 1896 its size was materially increased by the laying out of nearly an acre of land, entitled Walnut annex.*

The following are all the inscriptions now to be found in this burial ground bearing dates prior to 1800.

SUFFOLK COUNTY DEEDS.

VOLUME VI.

The following are abstracts of all records in volume VI of the Suffolk county registry of deeds relating to Essex county persons and property, where parties are given as residing, or property is mentioned as being located in Essex county. The records in this volume cover the period from 1669 to 1672.

Richard Cooke of Boston, merchant, attorney for Thomas Beebe and wife Melicent, sometime the relict of William Southmead of Gloucester, mariner, deceased, William Southmead and John Southmead of New London, sons of said William and Melicent, conveyed to Peter Gee of Boston, fisherman, for fifty-six pounds, house and land in Boston, bounded by low water, the sea, land of John Sweet and the town slip, June 12, 1668. Witnesses: John Sweet (his M mark), Edward Ellis and William Pearse, scr.—Page 5.

The Ketch called the Hope, of Salem, whereof Edward Fauerier (or Feuerier) was commander in 1668, is mentioned as on a voyage from the Island of Menis in the West Indies.—Pages 75, 77, 80.

Edward Collicott, aged about fifty-four, dwelling at Hampton, testified that, being at Salsbury in April, three or four years before, came in one Henry Stevens from Narraganset or Rhode Island, as he said, enquiring about a woman who was come from thence, which I know was at that time the wife of one William Risby, and the said woman came hither along with one young Pineon, and then said Stephens affirmed that Risby was dead, and that he had a right to her; and according to understanding of most people Stephens and she lived together as man and wife, she afterwards had a child in Dover prison, within the same year, and had she not broke prison she had been brought to Boston to be tried for her life, as I was informed by the jail keeper. Sworn to 17: —: 1669.—Page 96.

Elizabeth Henry Nelson (signed "Henry Nelson") of Boston, cler: aged sixty years and upwards, deposed that John Everard alias John Webb, sometime of Boston, merchant, late deceased, did in his lifetime sell to Capt. Samuel Scarlet of Boston one thousand acres of land, meadow and pasture near the river Merrimack, adjoining to the lands which said John sold to Richard Shatswell, Samuel Varnum and Edward Coburne, all three late of Ipswich, Mass., yeomen. Sworn to 7: 11: 1669-70, before Richard Bellingham, governor, and Edward Tyng, assistant.—Page 156.

Richard Dummer of Newberry, gentleman, and wife ffrances, for fifty pounds, conveyed to John Hull of Boston, merchant, one and one-half acres of land in Boston, bounded with a highway leading towards Charlestown, land sometime of John Webb, now of Mrs. Thatcher and land of Capt. Thomas Clarke and children of George Davis, Jan. 3, 1665. Witnesses: Ephraim Turner, Jeremiah Dummer, John Rogers and Sam: Phillips.—Page 235.

REV. JOHN MURRAY.

ROWLEY, 24th Auguſt, 1769.

Mr. HALL,

Your this week's Gazette gives us from Newbury-Port, an advertiſement of Mr. Murray's preaching to vaſt numbers of people, for ten days together; and then going out of town with parade. Pleaſe to publiſh what here follows, and you will oblige, at leaſt, one of your Cuſtomers.

THE Newbury Port intelligence will lead ſtrangers to think, that the miniſters in this neighbourhood pay Mr. Murray all that regard, which is due to a miniſter of the goſpel, of the firſt abilities, and the moſt unblemiſhed character: That they ſet aſide the cenſure of a preſbytery, and of a Synod in Ireland, and again of a preſbytery in America, that he is under, and the faithful notice given of this, by Boſton miniſters, as not worth regarding: And that they accept Mr. Murray's own teſtimony in oppoſition to theſe eccleſiaſtic bodies, as his full diſcharge from the Crime. I am ſorry that I muſt allow, ſix miniſters in the county have opened to him, while he ſtands condemned, by his proper judges; and we not able to ſay,—the judgment is not juſt. The conduct of four of theſe miniſters towards Itinerants has been ſuch, that none will wonder at their receiving him. The other two are men of prudence: One of them yielded to his people: ſo that they, rather than he, opened: The other of theſe two gentlemen had not full information on one ſide, and miſinformation on the other, reſpecting Mr. Murray. The numbers that flocked to hear him, doubtleſs, were great; but, I ſuppoſe, exaggerated, eſpecially that at Mr. Leſlie's pariſh, where the meeting-houſe is ſo ſmall, that half of the loweſt number fixed upon, would, I gueſs, crowd it full. But had there been double the numbers to follow this gentlemen, I believe it would not amount to an evidence of love to Chriſt, to his goſpel, or to his miniſters; nor would it prove that Mr. Murray is a gentlemen of good morals. To what good end then it ſerves to publiſh it, I am at a loſs.

Mr. HALL,

Pleaſe to inſert the following piece in your next, and you'll oblige not a few of your Cuſtomers.

IN a paper of laſt week the public were favoured with a very pompous account of one Mr. John Murray, who for ſome time hath been abundant in labours at Newbury-Port, and a few other places. This account, like others of the ſame ſort, and publiſhed for like ends, appears to be partly true, partly falſe, and partly doubtful; and in ſome other reſpects, defective.

That he left Newbury-Port Auguſt 8, as the account ſays, and went to Haverhill, intending from thence to Boston, &c. may be true; but that he was accompanied to Haverhill by a number of gentlemen is tho't to be doubtful, the truth hereof depending very much on the definition of a gentleman's character, for, beſides the Rev'd. Mr. Parſons of Newbury-Port, I have been particularly informed only of one Mr. M——n, who keeps a public houſe at Lynn, as attending him; tho' 'tis not improbable there might be others of leſs note, and ſo not particularly mentioned, to make up the uſual rout on ſuch occaſions. That he "preached every day for ten days," as declared, may be true; but that he "preached to vaſt numbers of people, from five to ten thouſand at a time," as aſſerted, is ſuppoſed to be falſe, it being much queſtioned whether, at any one time, he had even five thouſand to hear him:—Nor does his preaching in the open field, at Mr. Leſlie's, at all prove what is aſſerted, as Mr. Leſlie's is a ſmall meeting-houſe, deſigned to accommodate a very ſmall parith: And this part of the account would, I apprehend, have appeared more perfect, if the places where he preached had been particularly mentioned; which ſo far as I can learn, were Portſmouth, at the Rev. Dr. Langdon's, Rev. Mr. Haven's, and Mr. Drown's. Newbury-Port, at the Rev. Meſſrs. Parſon's and Marſh's: Newbury, Hale's: Linebrook, Leſlie's, and Chebacco, Cleaveland's.

The account ſays, "A conſiderable number of the clergy attended his preaching,"—I know not who attended at other places, but, on enquiry, can hear of none but the following gentlemen, among his hearers at Newbury-Port, whoſe names, I think, ſhould have been publiſhed, for the honor of Mr. Murray, viz. Rev. Meſſrs. Parſons and Marth, of Newbury-Port: Hale and Noble, of Newbury: Hibbert of Ameſbury: Noyes, of South-Hampton; and Perley, of Hampton-Falls.

'Tis added, "And perhaps no one was ever more univerſally approved of in this country."—This I conceive, muſt be underſtood only of his hearers, who are but a very ſmall part of the country; and only, I would preſume, with reſpect to his preaching, abſtracted from his moral character. It is ſaid farther, "prejudice, bigotry, and uncharitableneſs, ſeemed to be wholly laid aſide." Whether this is meant of Mr. Murray, or his admirers, I am uncertain, but ſhall be glad if it proves true, of both, or either of them.

This pompous account concludes in the following manner. "As to any reports being propagated, that this gentleman forces himſelf into other men's labours, it is far otherwiſe; he rather has a happy talent, at healing, than making diviſions."—I do not think Mr. Murray has entered the pulpit of any miniſter by force and arms, but 'tis ſuppoſed he, or his friends, have really forced him into ſome, if his being introduced againſt the free choice of the miniſter of the place, may be looked upon in that light.

And whatever his talent is, at making or healing diviſions, it is well known, his preaching in the manner he has done, has already occaſioned much uneaſineſs and diſorder. In ſome places where the miniſter has invited him, either freely, or thro' conſtraint, ſome of his people have been highly offended thereat. Other miniſters, who, on account of his ſuſpicious character, have refuſed him, againſt the importunate clamours of ſome of their people, have been blamed therefor, and large numbers of their ſtated aſſemblies, have left their own meetings, and gone out of town to hear him, travelling many miles on the Lord's day, to the breach of order, and the offence and grief of their neighbours.

Whether his conduct, productive of ſuch things as theſe, tends rather to heal than to make diviſions, every one muſt judge; and many perhaps, will be at no loſs in a ſhort time. I really think, it would be more for the intereſt of true ramble thro' the country, in order to preach and be applauded, wherever he, or his admirers, can get admittance for him.

ANCIENT PEARL HOUSE.

Cornelius Browne of Reading, a farmer, for seventy pounds, purchased of Joseph Dowding of Boston, merchant, a tract of two hundred acres of land in Boxford Sept. 10, 1703. Upon this lot Mr. Browne built the house known as the old Pearl house, probably in the following spring, as he took up his residence here at that time. His wife Susanna died in 1734, at the age of seventy-four; and, March 3, 1737-8, Mr. Browne sold one hundred and forty acres of the land and the eastern half of the house to Richard Pearl, a housewright, of Bradford. Mr. Pearl subsequently became possessed of the remainder of the house and land adjoining.

About the time of his purchase of the estate, Mr. Pearl built in the rear of the house the first grist mill in that parish.

Mr. Pearl died Dec. 20, 1793, at the age of ninety-one; and his son John Pearl succeeded him upon the farm.

John Pearl died Dec. 19, 1825, at the age of eighty-seven; and his son John Pearl then owned and occupied the house.

John Pearl, jr., died here, in old age; and he was succeeded on the farm by his son George Pearl. When the old meeting house in that parish, which was erected in 1774, was taken down in 1843, Mr. Pearl purchased the two-story porch, and annexed it to the east end of his house (at the left in the engraving of the house). This still retains the door and window. Mr. Pearl was a prominent man, representing the town in the legislature in 1857, the last under the town district system. He died in 1878, at the age of eighty, and his widow survived him several years. Several of his daughters remained upon the homestead; Ruth, wife of James H. Webster, and her family being the present owners and occupants.

The view of the house presented in the frontispiece is that of its back side. The house was built to face the south, which was generally the case when houses were erected before roads were established, and it fronts upon a field. The highway was laid out at the rear of the house, and that side of the house practically became its front. It is apparent that the house was constructed at two periods. The rooms are large and the ceiling low. It is a specimen of early New England architecture worth visiting.

*Another article critical of Mr. Murray was published in the Essex Gazette of Aug. 22-29, 1769, but its great length of three columns and bareness of local allusions bars it from republishment herewith.

PART OF SALEM IN 1700.

NO. 33.

SCALE: 1 inch = 600 ft.

SALEM IN 1700. NO. 33.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The portion of Salem included in the map shown on page 176 is that known as Castle Hill neck. The plan is based on the ancient deeds, but the result of the investigation of this neck is not as satisfactory as the other sections have been on account of the absence of many deeds and the fact that Hon. Benjamin Lynde purchased the entire tract about 1730, and obliterated the division lines. However, the map is substantially accurate, and is drawn on a scale of six hundred feet to an inch.

The stream of water to the north of Castle hill became a mill pond upon the building of the mill in 1664, and ever since that date has been so called. In 1709, it was called the South river mill pond. The branch on the eastern side was called mill creek in 1695, and mill creek pond in 1698. The branch on the western side was called ye river in 1672.

Castle hill was so called as early as 1636.

There were apparently no houses standing upon this section of Salem in 1700.

John Turner Lot. This lot was granted to Elias Stileman of Salem before 1636; and, for fifty-two pounds, he conveyed it to James Smith of Marblehead Dec. 13, 1652.* Mr. Smith built a house and barn upon the lot, and conveyed the estate to his only son, James Smith, then residing at Bristol, in England, June 13, 1656.† Samuel Cutler then lived in the house. The son apparently came to America, as James Smith of Marblehead, mariner, for fifty pounds, conveyed the lot, the buildings probably being gone, to John Turner of Salem, mariner, May 11, 1672.‡ The lot belonged to John Turner in 1700.

Erasmus James and Mary James Lots. These lots were laid out to Richard Rowland July 23, 1667, and at that time it was agreed that a highway of one and one-half rods wide should be laid out, from the meadow of Mr. Rowland that he had of Mr. Gott, over land of Capt. James Smith, "& is to ly along under ye hill by the barne, to y^e^ land of Mr. Rowland & from thence to go so far as the dwelling house, one half on said Richard Rowland's and one half on sd James Smith's land, till it come over the land of ye sd Smith, by the house to the bridge, wch bridge is to be maintained by said Rowland and Smith proportionable to their land on Castle hill."* Mr. Rowland lived in Marblehead, being a husbandman; and died in 1685, having devised his land at Castle hill to his son Richard Rowland and daughter Mary wife of Erasmus James. Richard Rowland, jr., who also lived in Marblehead, conveyed his interest in the land to Mr. James, who lived in Marblehead, being "a planter or fisherman," June 1, 1689.† Mr. and Mrs. James owned the lots in 1700.

Robert Wilson Lot. This lot was apparently a part of the land granted to Richard Rowland July 23, 1667; and he probably conveyed it to Robert Buffum in or before 1669, when the latter died. It was subsequently in the occupation of his widow, Tamazen Buffum. By an agreement made April 29, 1679, it became the property of their grandson, Robert Wilson. Christopher Foster and his wife Deborah, for fifteen pounds, conveyed one-third of the lot to Mr. Wilson Aug. 13, 1697.‡ Mr. Wilson owned the lot in 1700.

Samuel Robinson and Caleb Buffum Lot. This was a part of the lot of Richard Rowland, in 1667, probably. Subsequently, William Charles died possessed of an undivided half of it, having devised his interest to his grandchildren, James Dennis, jr., Amos Dennis, and Agnes, wife of Thomas Trefry, all of Marblehead. These grandchildren conveyed their in-

THE OLD SPINET.

BY JAMES BUCKHAM.

It is slim and trim and spare,
Like the slender Lady Claire
In the gowns they used to wear,
Long ago;
And it stands there in the gloom
Of the gabled attic room,
Like a ghost whose vacant tomb
None may know.

I can see the lady's hands
White as lilies, as she stands
Strumming fragments of Durand's
On the keys;
And I hear the thin, sweet strain
Of the Plymouth hymns again,
Like the sob of windless rain
In the trees.

She would play the minuet
For the stately-stepping set,
While the ardent dancers met,
Hands and hearts;
Did the old-time spinet care
If Dan Cupid unaware
Pricked the breasts of brave and fair
With his darts?

Now the spiders with their floss
Up and down the keyboard cross,
And the strings are dull as dross,
Once so bright;
No one cares to touch the keys—
Stained old yellow ivories—
Save the ghosts some dreamer sees
In the night.

Precinct of Salem and Beverly, Sept. 8, 1769.

ON Tueſday the 5th Inſtant, forty-one young Women of this Place, moved perhaps by the many late Examples of others, who have in a ſimilar Way teſtified their high Eſteem of their Paſtors, for their Work's Sake, viz. by ſeeking Wool and Flax, and working willingly for them with their Hands,—having provided themſelves with theſe Materials, met early in the Morning at the Houſe of the Reverend Mr. Chipman, and in the Evening preſented him with ſeventy Run of well-wrought Yarn.—A Run is a Skein of twenty Knots; the number of Knots in the whole being 1396. Mr. Chipman had no Knowledge of this Work and Labour of Love, till the Day was appointed and near at Hand; but although he deſired not the Gift, yet he always rejoices to ſee Fruit abounding to their Account; and the repeated Kindneſſes of his People to him, in his advanced Age, as well as their living in the Exerciſe of ſocial Virtues each toward the other, excited his Gratitude.

"N. B. The young Gentlewomen were not moved in the leaſt by political Principles in the Affair above, yet they are cordial Lovers of Liberty, particularly of the Liberty of drinking Tea with their Bread and Butter, to which their Paſtor conſents."

Miles Ward advertised for sale at his store near his dwelling house best Philadelphia stone lime, sole "leaver," neats leather, calves skins, bran by the hogshead or smaller quantity, and rice.

ANSWERS.

353. Emerson Baker, son of John Baker, esq., of Topsfield, was a trader, and lived in Newbury in 1811. By deed dated March 1, 1811, and recorded in Essex registry of deeds, book 210, leaf 86, being "of Topsfield, trader, now residing in Newbury," he released his interest in his father's real and personal estate. The Newbury town records may show something of his children.—Ed.

378. Wilmot Red (or Reed), the witchcraft victim of Marblehead in 1692, wife of Samuel Reed of Marblehead, fisherman, is called sister by Ann, widow of Samuel Condy of Marblehead, in her will, dated 9: 8 mo: 1678, and proved Nov. 29, 1678.—Ed.

EDITORIAL.

This number completes volume twelve of The Essex Antiquarian. There have been published during the year wills proved in Essex county in 1664 and 1665; the gravestone inscriptions in the city of Haverhill bearing dates prior to 1800; the genealogies of Essex county families from Bridges to Brown; the record of the Essex county Revolutionary soldiers and sailors from Bradbury to Brooks; abstracts of the old Norfolk county records, 1673 and 1674; Ipswich quarterly court records and files, 1658; Salem quarterly court records and files, 1658; and miscellaneous genealogical notes from the records from Bradstreet to Brown.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Vital Records of Beverly, Massachusetts, to the end of the year 1849. Two volumes. Topsfield, Mass., 1906, 1907. These two volumes aggregate one thousand and twenty-seven pages (400 and 627). They include all records of births, marriages and deaths in the town records, church records, cemetery inscriptions, bibles, etc., and are published under the provisions of the statute. Nearly three hundred bibles have furnished additional information. The price, postage prepaid, is $10.75. Address the publisher, The Topsfield Historical Society, Topsfield, Mass.

Edmund Lewis of Lynn, Massachusetts, and some of his Descendants. By George Harlan Lewis. Salem, Mass., 1908. This is a paper covered volume of one hundred and fifty-one pages, and is a reprint from the Historical Collections of the Essex Institute, its publisher. The author, of Los Angeles, Cal., though far from the original sources of information, has produced a book that is reasonably full, especially in the earlier generations of the family. In all more than two thousand descendants are represented; but they are not indexed. Price $1.60, postpaid. Address The Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.

The Grafton Magazine of History and Genealogy. New York, 1908. This is the title of a new quarterly magazine, issued by The Grafton Press, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Number one of volume one just issued is dated June, 1908. Henry R. Stiles, A. M., M. D., is honorary editor, George W. Ellis, editor of history, Emma E. Bingham, editor of genealogy, and Frederick H. Hitchcock is the managing editor. It is octavo in size, and this number contains fifty-six pages. There are no illustrations. The paper is fine, and the letter press good. The price is two dollars per year, and fifty cents for a single number.

The first article in this number is entitled The Society of the Cincinnati and its Future, by Charles B. Alexander, LL. D., being an address delivered before the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati July 4 of the current year. The succeeding articles are Ideal Newport in the Eighteenth Century, by William B. Weeden; The Strange Story of Roger Williams, by Edmund J. Carpenter; The Ancient Stirlings of Cadder, Sheriffs of Stirling and some others; Andrew Ellicott, an astronomer; and The Early Ancestors of the Jewett Family.

IPSWICH INSCRIPTIONS.

ANCIENT BURYING GROUND.

THE original part of this burial place was instituted when the town was laid out in 1634. It was enlarged by the purchase, for thirty pounds, from Shoreborne Willson of Ipswich, cooper, of three-eighths of an acre of land, being a part of his house lot, May 8, 1707.* This addition was four rods wide on the street. The second addition was made by the purchase of a part of a house and three acres of land, for seventy pounds, of Jeremiah Day of Ipswich, yeoman, Jan. 26, 1795.† This included land on the west and rear sides of the original burying ground. Other and large additions were made subsequently. The following are all the inscriptions to be found there bearing dates prior to 1800.

And of Mrs ELISABETH his Wife, who
Was born March 10th 1730; & died Sept 22d 1785,
In the 56th year of her age.
His mind was open, ardent and enterprizing:
He was a kind husband, a tender indulgent father:
In his house he was liberal & hospitable:
Faithful to his trust, upright in his intentions,
In his operations
Active, perfevering and extenfive;
By which he afforded
Employment and fubfiftance
To the induftrious and the indigent;
Contributed to the benefit of the publick,
And merited the Character of a
Ufeful and valuable member of fociety—
His Wife was moral,
Thoughtful, and, fofar as her ſlender health would permit,
Attentive to the benefit & happineſs of her Family.
Deeply affected by the death of her husband,
And the increaſing infirmities of her feeble conſtitution,
She languiſh'd and, three months after him,
Expir'd.
Short was their ſeparation; ſoon rejoin'd
In the dark grave, to native duſt conſign'd,
They ſleep, till death his human prey reſtore,
And earth & ſkies & time ſhall be no more.

Ah precious flower! was it the frown
Of Heaven, that cut thee early down?
Or did the hand of ſovereign love
Raiſe thee to bloom in Paradiſe above?

ERECTED to the Memory of MRS ZERVIAH FRISBIE, The amiable & virtuous Confort of The REVD LEVI FRISBIE; who departed this Life on the 21ft Day of Augt AD. 1778: Aged 31 Years & 5 Mons

Prudent & meek she paſs'd the various woes,
Below'd by friends, unconfur'd by her foes;
Yet worth like this, could not avail to ſave
One favour'd mortal from an early Grave:
Chear'd with freſh hopes Lifes future bliſs to gain
She drop'd,—and told us all this world is vain.
Peruſe ye happy pairs this ſpeaking ſtone,
And think her fate ere long may be your own.

Bennet and others the iron, and if Mr. Webb would be pleased to get it weighed they would trust him for the weighing of it. Sworn in Salem court, 2 : 10 : 1658.

Richard Cook, aged about forty-eight, deposed that he heard Mr. Samuell Archer acknowledge that he refused to sign the bond tendered to him by Mr. Webb or any other security, as expressed by Captain Hutchinson and Samuell Archer, etc. They heard that there were forty pounds due from the company to Bennet by an account of Major Hawthorne and Captain Marshall. Sworn at Salem court 2 : 10 : 1658.

Edward Hutchinson deposed that he was at Mr. Webb's house when John Hathorne and Sam Benit and Sam Archer were there, and they demanded of Webb the iron that was to be paid upon arbitration. Mr. Webb answered either in these words or to this eff ect, that he heard there had been an arbitration made between Mr. Geffards and Saml Benet, and if he might see that there was due which he was liable to pay he would pay it, otherwise thought there was no reason for him now to pay it after the accounts were made up. Sworn 2 : 10 : 1658.

Thomas Bligh, aged about thirty-one, deposed as to witnessing bond. Sworn 27 : 9: 1658, before John Endecott, gov.

Elisha Hutchinson, aged about seventeen, deposed that he weighed the iron, Sept. 2, 1657, for Samuel Benet's account which was for Mr. Henry Webb, and Samuel Robinson and John Marshall assisted him, and the iron was laid aside in my father's warehouse for Mr. Bennet. Sworn 29 : 9 : 1658, before Natha : Duncan, commissioner.

Mr. Will : Browne v. Will : Towne. Case.

Jo[n] Haukes v. Joseph Cooke. Review. [Writ : John Hauks v. Joseph Cooke of Cambridge ; dated Nov. 20, 1658 ; case, about a young mare that defendant took away from plaintiff ; served by Richard Blood of Lynn, attorney for Samuel Archard, marshall, 19 : 9 : 1658.

Thomas Clarke deposed that "I beinat Goodman Cowdree house at Reading when Joseph Cooke came for warrant, I tould Mr. Cook this colt was non of his. said Cooke to me, there is a colt I know in the woods would put an end to this business which I believe said he is Hartts colt. I told Cook again If it had bin my case as it was his I would a gott up the colt whatever it cost me." Sworn 2 : 10 : 1658.

John Hauks bill of costs, £4, 15*s.*, 4*d.*

Thomas Hutchinson deposed that my father-in-law Adam Hakes gave his son John Hakes a colt & he put it to Isaacke Hartes to keep. Sworn at Ipswich court March 30, 1658. Copy.

Adam Hakes, aged about fifty, deposed that a man may swear a colt to be the same colt after it is gone out of his sight any time, so far I can swear this colt to be the colt I gave my son John Hakes for it hath a black list down the back ; so had that. It hath a piece cut out of the left ear; so had that. It hath a scar in the right ear which to me shows the hole which was made with a small sharp iron before it went up to Isaac Hart's. I asked Joseph Cooke who marked his colt in the ear, and he said, "I cut a piece in his ear, but not quite off." Sworn 30 (1) 1658. Copy.

Elizabeth Hart, aged about thirty-five, deposed that she had known the colt since it was a fortnight old, and since I have known it by the marks, and, this colt being lost, my husband went out to find, expecting to be out three days, but he came within two or three hours, and left at our house, and I knew before he told me it was the colt. Sworn 1 : 26 : 1657-8, before Edward Johnson, commissioner of Woburn. Copy.

Samuel Hutchinson deposed that he cut a piece out of the colt's left ear when it was eight months old, and was put to Isaac Hart. About a year after Isaac Hart brought a young mare to the farm where I was and asked me if this was the colt I marked. I told him it was ; and about the next spring, being at Reading, I heard Mr. Cooke had attached John Hauks colt, and looked and saw it was the same colt I marked for John Hawks. Sworn 2 : 10 : 1658.

Isaac Harte, aged about forty, deposed that it was the same colt. Sworn 29 : 1 : 1658, before Edward Johnson, commissioner of Woburn. Copy.

Francis Hutchinson deposed that he saw Isaac Hart and Samuel Hutchinson mark John Hawkes colt, and it was the same colt. Sworn 2 : 10 : 1658.

Samuel Hutchinson, aged about forty, testified that he helped mark the colt. Sworn 23 : 7 : 1658, before Thomas Marshall, commissioner.

Gregory Stone of Cambridge, aged about sixty-seven, deposed that November last I had a black mare colt in our pound, and Joseph Cooke of Cambridge claimed it, and it had no mark; but to same day it had a slit given it on the top of one ear and a shred on the middle of the ear cut off, and the pound keeper told me Mr. Cook did it, and I fetched away the colt. Cooke followed me to my house and told me he made it. Sworn 18 : 7 : 1658, before Richard Russell, commissioner of Charlestown. Copy.

Thomas Clark deposed when Joseph Cook brought the colt from Reading to Cambridge, etc. Sworn 2 : 10 : 1658.

John Gould, aged about forty, deposed that Joseph Cooke and the marshall of Cambridge took through my yard the colt that John Hakes formerly replevined out of the hands of Cooke. Sworn 22 : 7 : 1658, before Thomas Marshall, commissioner of Lynn. Copy.

Mathew Edwards, aged twenty-five, deposed that he had often seen the colt sometimes four days in the week, and in my conscience this is the colt. Sworn 30 (1) 1658. Copy.

Adam Hauks and Samuel Huchinson deposed that Mr. Epps of Ipswich, being attorney for Joseph Cooke at the Ipswich court, said after the trial, "I would wish my cousin Cooke not to meddle any more about this colt, for I believe this is not my cousin Cooke's colt, for he did not mark with such an ear mark, but with a slit on the ear." Sworn 2 : 10 : 1658.

Edward Collins deposed that he sold the colt about one and a half years ago, with dam, to Cooke, and when it strayed away he sent for him and his servant to testify if it was the same colt, and deposed that it was. Sworn at Salem 2 : 10 : 1658.

Elizabeth Hartt deposed that a while after Joseph Cooke brought this colt back from Cambridge, I hear Cooke say that if your brother had come instead of your father, he that could show best proof should have the colt; nay, said Cook, rather than have it go to court I would have drawn lots for it. Sworn in Salem court, 2 : 10 : 1658.

Thomas Clarke, aged forty, deposed. Sworn 30 : 1 : 1658. Copy.

William Eaton, aged about fifty-four, and John Eaton, aged twenty-two, deposed. Sworn before Edward Johnson, commissioner. Copy.

from Salem your friend

William Bartholomew

The plaintiff's declaration was as follows:—

I being settled at Reding upon some land of John Goulds having six years to continue thereon, where I might have provided for family. Mr. W[m] Bartholomew being directed by Mr Batter to me to go to Gloucester: I promised to go to Gloucester to see the business & agree if I liked it. About the middle of Aug. last the second day of the week, went & waiting Mr. Bartholomews coming home, agreed to go. The expense of moving being 42[s] in English corne to bring his goods to Salem & waiting there a fortnight with my famaly for the boat & 2 bushel corne it cost for store house room for goods, the loss of a swine at my hasty coming away from Reding & a sow with pig at Salem, damaged corne to some extent, & was forsed to live in a wet & cold house. Mr. Bartholomew no employing him, & winter approaching, the is put to great straits.

Mr. Bartholomew's answer to Mr. Curtis' declaration was as follows:—

whereas he speaks of his being so well settled at Reding we answer the defendt did nothing to force him to remove b[y] was voluntary in it, 2ly it concerned hi[m] first to consider how he should have be[en] tered himself before he removed wha[t] great estate he had there we know no[t] but so far as it appears to us it did no[t] exceed the paymt of his rent

whereas he saith he came to Glouces-ter the middle of August & liked the acomodations and came near to a close the diferance there not being consider-able whither the difference were so small or not let these things be considered first noe tyme spoken of when he should enter upon it. 2ly no agreement about the haye & straw. 3ly no agreement about repayre of houses and fences. 4ly about the maner of his working or how he should pay his rent nothing spoken unto nor how the cattell should be ordered 5ly nothing spoken unto who should pay rates & beare common charges with diverse other considerations not to have been omitted.

Duly this much was fully agreed on both pts that the sayd Zacheous should come a fortnight upon tryall w[ch] is proved in court upon oath his failing therein hath been the occasion of all the trouble that hath followed and wch is mentioned in his declaration to be referred to me was never performed but instead thereof a vexatious suit commenced pretending great damages & ataching the defendant in £100 action; while defendant was busily imployed to acomodate the pltife for his coming thither.

Wm Bartholomew

Bernard Thorne, aged about twenty-four, servant to Wm. Bartholomew, deposed that his master said he feared Curtis was too weak to manage the house and lands at Cape Ann. Sworn 27 : 9 : 1658, before Daniel Denison.

John Newmach of Ipswich testified that Wm. Bartholomew agreed with him for his bark about beginning of October last to fetch his goods from Cape Ann. Thomas Harris also testified to same.

John Fitch testified that Curtis did not come when he agreed. Sworn as above.

Rowland Powell of Gloucester testified that he saw Curtis at Bartholomew's house, speaking with Bartholomew's wife about going to Gloucester & seemed to be much troubled about the moving. His family were then at Salem. Sworn 10 mo: 1: 1658, before Daniel Denison.

Walter Price, aged forty-five, deposed that, being at Mr. Gedney's house one month past and desired by Bartholomew to have some agitation betwixt him and Edmund Batter, said that he disliked to find fault, but Curtis was not fit for his employment and was a sickly person, and that the town would not receive him unless Bartholomew would discharge the town, and Curtis' wife was froward woman. He would not employ him unless upon day labor. Bartholomew said that he wondered that Mr. Batter would commend such a man to him. 1: 10: 1658.

Hillyard Veren, aged about thirty-seven, was at Mr. Batter's house one evening when Zacheus Cortes came in, he said, from Gloucester with a letter directed to Mr. Batter from Mr. Bartholomew, mentioning terms of agreement, the house, land and team for seventeen pounds per year, the hay and tackling to be paid for by Cortes. Sworn at Salem court 2: 10: 1658, per Hillyard Veren cleric.

Mordecay Hunton, aged about seventeen, servant of Wm. Bartholomew, deposed that Curtis on his second coming had said he had had but words with Mrs. Bartholomew, and he thought he should not come at all. Sworn 27: 9: 1658, before Daniel Denison.

Thomas Whitredge testified to hearing Curtis talking at Bartholomew's house in Gloucester. Sworn in Salem court 2: 10: 1658.

Thomas Rigg testified that Curtis did not come according to his promise. Sworn in court.

Sarah Batter, aged about forty-eight, testified that Bartholomew, coming to the house of her husband, asked if Curtis were coming, and she made answer that he was not. Mr. Bartholomew answered, You should have hired a messenger, and desired that one might be sent. Deponent's husband got a messenger, and the next morning John Oliver and this deponent's husband sent him to Mr. Hen: Bartholomew's house, where Wm. Bartholomew lodged when Mr. Bartholomew was at our house. Sworn 3: 10: 1658, before Wm. Hathorne.

Edmund Batter, aged about fifty, deposed that coming from Boston in company with Wm. Bartholomew, he desired me to tell him of a man to manage his farm and draw logs to his saw-mill at Gloucester. I sent him to Zacheus Cortes of Reading, who was at Thomas Antrum's farm at work.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on page 36 represents that part of Salem lying to the south of the State Normal school building. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of six hundred feet to an inch. The line with the dashes across it shows where the Marblehead branch of the Boston & Maine Railroad now runs. The dotted lines show where the road to Marblehead was laid out in 1737, an account of which was given in a former article. It is now a part of Lafayette street.

Loring avenue was the old way to Marblehead, having been laid out in 1666, as described in a former article. Its location is marked on the map, "Highway to Marblehead." It was called the highway as it goes toward Marblehead in 1676; highway to Marblehead, 1713; ye country road leading to Marblehead, 1719; ye road leading through South field to Marblehead, 1734; the old road so called to Marblehead, 1773; the road leading to Forest river bridge, so called, and Salem hospital, 1777; and Loring avenue since 1881.

The water on the east was called the salt water or Salem harbor in 1725; Forest river, 1734; ye harbor, 1737; and ye cove or river, 1791.

There were apparently no houses standing upon this section of Salem in 1700.

John Robinson Lot. This was a part of the original Elias Mason lot as early as 1666. George Cox, jr., of Salem, for twenty-three pounds, conveyed it to John Robinson, sr., of Salem, tailor, Jan. 4, 1692.* For forty pounds, Mr. Robinson conveyed it to William Ropes of Salem, ship carpenter, March 7, 1708-9.†

Mannasseh Marston Lot. This was a part of the original Elias Mason lot, and was owned next by Hilliard Veren, who conveyed it to William Flint of Salem before 1672. Mr. Flint died the next year, having devised it to John Hathorne of Salem. It was then valued at two pounds. Mr. Hathorne was a merchant, and, for five pounds and ten shillings, conveyed it to Mannasseh Marston of Salem, blacksmith, May 27, 1678.‡ Mr. Marston owned it in 1700.

Edward Flint Lot. This lot was conveyed by Henry Cooke of Salem, butcher, for three pounds, to William Flint of Salem July 23, 1652.§ Mr. Flint died, possessed of the lot, in 1673, having devised it to his son Edward Flint, who owned it in 1700.

Estate of John Pickering Lot. That part of this lot lying south of the dashes belonged to Lt. John Pickering as early as 1678.

That part of the lot lying north of the dashes early belonged to Richard Waters of Salem, gunsmith, and Richard Adams of Salem. Mr. Waters, for six pounds, sold his half to John Talby of Salem, but no deed ever passed between them probably;‖ and Mr. Waters conveyed it to

Walter Price of Salem, shopkeeper, to whom Mr. Talby had sold it, 25 : 11 : 1653.* Mr. Price, for six pounds and fifteen shillings, conveyed the same interest to Richard Adams, the owner of the other half interest, 19 : 12 : 1657.† This deed states that a part of this half was at one time the property of William King, sr. For fifty pounds, Mr. Adams conveyed the whole of this part of the lot to John Pickering of Salem, yeoman, who owned the other part, Nov. 16, 1670.‡ Mr. Pickering died in May, 1694, possessed of the entire lot, having devised it to his sons Benjamin and William. They held it undivided until 1701. Benjamin Pickering, who was a mariner, and lived in Salem, for fourteen pounds, four shillings and four pence, conveyed his half of the lot to Deliverance Parkman of Salem, merchant, May 21, 1696;§ and on the same day, for a similar consideration, Mr. Parkman reconveyed it to Benjamin.‖

Jeremiah Neale and Lydia Hart Lot. This lot of swamp land was the property of John Neale, sr., of Salem, who died in 1672, possessed of it. In his will he devised it to his "son Jeremiah and his son's son, and to his sons John, Jonathan and Joseph and his daughter Lydia equally." It was then appraised at thirty pounds. John died possessed of his part 11 : 9 : 1679. Joseph lived in Salem, being a joiner, and conveyed his interest in the lot to his brother Jeremiah Neale of Salem Feb. 8, 1681-2.¶ Jeremiah Neale apparently purchased the interests of all the others except his sister Lydia, and they owned the lot together in 1700.

Alice Pickering Lot. This lot early belonged to Thomas James of Salem, husbandman, who conveyed it to William Flint of Salem July 23, 1652. Mr. Flint died in 1673, possessed of the lot, and his widow, Alice Flint, for love, conveyed it to her daughter Alice Pickering Aug. 22, 1696.* Mrs. Pickering owned it in 1700.

Nicholas Manning Lot. A part of this lot of upland was called very early "Friends lot"; and Elias Mason is said to have owned it in 1666. William Lord, sr., of Salem, for twenty-five pounds, conveyed the lot to Nicholas Manning of Salem, gunsmith, Feb. 20, 1667.† Captain Manning removed to Staten Island, N. Y., and, for thirty pounds, conveyed the lot to Jacob Manning of Salem, gunsmith, June 30, 1709.‡

John Ruck Lot. John Ruck owned this lot of ten acres as late as 1719.

John Browne Lot. This lot of marsh was early the property of William Lord. In 1700, it belonged to John Browne, esq., of Salem, merchant.

Benjamin Holmes Lot. This lot of marsh early belonged to William Lord; and to Benjamin Holmes of Salem, husbandman, in 1719.

Thomas Flint Lot. This half-acre of marsh belonged to Alexander Field of Salem, shoemaker, 14 : 2 : 1652, when he conveyed it to William Flint.‖ Mr. Flint died, possessed of it, in 1673, having devised it to his son Thomas Flint. It was then valued at five pounds. Thomas Flint owned it in 1700.

Jonathan Archer Lot. This lot of marsh early belonged to William Lord; and to Jonathan Archer in 1733.

REV. JOHN CHIPMAN.

Rev. John Chipman was born in Barnstable, Mass., Feb. 16, 1690-1. His father was Dea. Samuel Chipman, proprietor of the tavern called by his name in that town, and his mother was Sarah, daughter of Elder Henry Cobb. He graduated at Harvard college in 1711; and subsequently preached the gospel to a gathering of people in Salem and Beverly near Wenham lake. A parish was organized and incorporated there in October, 1713, and a meeting-house was erected immediately after the incorporation of the parish. Dec. 28, 1715, a church, of which he was one of the original members, was instituted, and he was ordained to the ministry and installed as the pastor of the new church and society. The parish was called The Precinct of Salem and Beverly, and has always been known popularly as the North Beverly society and church.

The invitation to Mr. Chipman to settle as the pastor of the church was brought about by the attendance and vote of Mrs. Mary Woodberry, the vote being but a bare majority for him.

His annual salary was fixed at sixty pounds, with an annual increase after his marriage of five pounds for four years. He also received one hundred pounds as a settlement, and one acre of land absolutely and the "strangers' money."*

Mr. Chipman married, first, Rebecca, daughter of Rev. Robert Hale of Beverly Feb. 12, 1719; and she died July 2 1751, at the age of forty-nine. He married, second, Hannah Warren Nov. 2 1751; and she died June 24, 1769, at the age of sixty-two.

Mr. Chipman was a man five feet and eight inches in height; of fine person, dignity and grace. He had superior natural ability, both mental and physical, and was a student, theology being his principal subject of investigation. He was distinguished for his knowledge of the contents of the Bible; and it has been said that he was partial to the science of medicine astrology.

In his pulpit exercises he was energetic, pungent and serious; and in the performance of the other functions of his office he was able, watchful, faithful, just and successful. He loved the gospel, and exemplified it in his life, especially socially and in benevolence. He manifested every Christian duty in his family, which was called, even in his lifetime, a school of useful knowledge and virtue. In times of adversity he had great patience, and when prosperity came he was glad, but not boastful.

He was not only a great blessing and influential in his own church and parish, but his influence was felt throughout New England, assisting frequently in ordinations and settlement of difficulties in other churches.

Age began to develop infirmities, and at his request Rev. Enos Hitchcock of Truro was installed as Mr. Chipman's associate in the ministry May 1, 1771. In the latter years of his life and ministry, the kindliness and esteem of his people were shown to him in many special ways; and in the firm hope of a happy immortality Mr. Chipman passed to his rest March 23, 1775, in the eighty-fifth year of his age and sixtieth of his ministry. His remains repose in the ancient and secluded North Beverly burying ground. On either side lies one of his wives. Slate slabs rise above their graves; and at the top of his stone is engraved in relief the half-length representation of a clergyman.

*A box was placed near the entrance to the meeting-house, into which strangers put contributions on the Sabbath. Usually such money was given to the minister in addition to his salary.—History of Beverly.

wearing gown and bands, the inscription being in Latin.*

Broad in his sympathies with men, he heartily embraced the good of all religious sects; and his life alone was a powerful restraint upon the vicious and an incentive to the virtuous. During his pastorate three hundred and eighty-four persons were added to the church, twenty-five of whom were admitted immediately after the great earthquake of 1727. He administered the rite of baptism to eight hundred and sixty-eight children and adults, married three hundred and three couples, and attended six hundred and thirty-one funerals. He performed the marriage ceremony of six clergymen, Rev. Pain Wingate of Amesbury, Rev. William Balch of Bradford, Rev. Joseph Champney of Beverly, Rev. John Warren of Wenham, Rev. Nehemiah Porter of Ipswich and Rev. Joseph Swain of Wenham.

Mr. Chipman published very little. In 1746, with Rev. Samuel Wigglesworth of Ipswich, he published a controversial pamphlet of forty-four pages, directed against Rev. William Balch of Bradford, who was accused of propagating Arminian tenets. He printed a thanksgiving sermon, and another on the close of the year.

Mr. Chipman had fifteen children, namely: Elizabeth, who married, first, Rev. John Warren of Wenham, and, second, Rev. Joseph Swain of Wenham; Sarah, who died in infancy; John, who was a leading lawyer of Marblehead and Falmouth (now in Maine); Sarah, who married John Leach, jr., of Salem; Samuel, a shipmaster, who lived in Ipswich and Salem; Rebecca, who married Rev. Nehemiah Porter of Chebacco parish, in Ipswich, Yarmouth, N. S., and Ashfield, Mass.; Robert, who died in childhood; Henry, who lived in Newburyport; Byley, who died in Boston at the age of eighteen; Robert Hale, who died at sea in his youth; Joseph, who lived in Salem and Beverly; Mary, who married Timothy Leach of Beverly; Hannah, who married Miles Ward, 3d, of Salem; Abigail, who married Capt. William Groves of Beverly; and Benjamin, who lived in Salem, being a sea captain. He educated his large family of children with great wisdom and prudence, and many prominent people who are his descendants cherish his memory.

The frontispiece of this number of The Essex Antiquarian has been engraved from the ancient portrait of Mr. Chipman.

*Copies of the inscriptions on his and his wives' gravestones have been printed in The Essex Antiquarian, volume III, page 122.

UNTENANTED.

BY MATTIE WINFIELD TORREY.

It stands alone, in all its grimness there,
Withdrawn a space from off the village street;
Its halls are empty, and its walls are bare,
And from the broad, uncurtained window-seat
The garish day looks in with curious eyes,
That neither wink nor close till daylight dies.

The wind's loud wail, the sighing of the breeze,
The ceaseless patter of the autumn rain,
The winter's storm, which bows the leafless trees,
And drives its sleet against the window-pane,
Each in its turn; and o'er the bare, brown walls,
Sometimes the sunshine, sometimes shadow, falls.

But, ah! from out the mansion life is fled;
There are no sounds to break the silence here;

The quiet city of the pulseless dead
Is not more still, more desolate, more drear;
No sound, no motion, dust and stillness all;
And e'en the echoes shudder, break and fall.

How many times this threshold has been crossed
By bounding footsteps! Eager hearts have come,
Aweary of the strife, and tempest-tossed,
To the safe harbor of the early home,
And from its shadow, girded up anew,
Gone forth to fight life's battle bravely through.

And these old walls have looked on many a night
Of revelry and mirth; and music's note
Has roused pale echo from her slumbers light,
That fair, young forms within the dance might float;
Brave youth, and manly port, and maiden grace,
Bloom out once more within the olden place.

NOTES.

SALEM, Sept. 19.

We hear that in the late Storm, a Coafting Sloop belonging to Wells, Littlefield, Maſter, was ſtove to Pieces near Squam, and two Men drowned: A Fiſhing Veſſel belonging to Ipſwich, ſtruck and turned Bottom upwards, near the ſame Place, the People ſaved: A Schooner, belonging to Portſmouth, aſhore at Sandy-Bay: And three of the Cape-Ann Boats ſtove to Pieces.——The ſame Evening the Storm happened, a Schooner belonging to Cape-Ann, bound a Fiſning, took Fire, was damaged a good Deal, and with much Difficulty it was extinguiſhed.

Mr. HALL, By inſerting the following in your Paper, you will oblige ſome of your Marblehead Readers.

As giving Praiſe to Virtue, and doing Juſtice to Merit, may tend to excite a principle in the Mind, that ſhall be attended with beneficial Conſequences; ſo when there is an Opportunity of ſhewing a Town the Loſs it has ſuſtained, by the Death of any young Perſon, who was remarkable for a good Behaviour, it ought to be embraced, for Reaſons that are obvious to every conſiderate Mind.—Miſs BETSEY STEVENS, who was interred here this Evening, and who is now a ſtriking Inſtance of the Frailty of human Life, has exhibited a Pattern worthy of Imitation; for notwithſtanding ſhe loſt her Parents before ſhe could be ſenſible of the Loſs, ſhe preſerved in all her Actions a Decorum of Behaviour that right Reaſon approves, and a Fondneſs for Virtue that good Senſe always dictates. It is allowed by her Acquaintance, that ſhe had the Wiſdom and Diſcretion of a Matron, joined with youthful Sweetneſs and virgin Modeſty.—Wiſdom is to be revered, wherever it may be found; for her Ways are Ways of Pleaſantneſs, and all her Paths are Peace.

Minneapolis, Minn.

505. William Short of Newburyport died at sea about 1800. Does any one know the exact date? Also, when did his wife Martha die? R. W. S.

Charlestown.

ANSWERS.

501. Henry, son of Eliphalet and Lydia (Adams) Jaques was born in Newbury March 18, 1738; and died there Jan. 13, 1792, at the age of "fifty-three years ten months and four days." His wife Hannah survived him, and died the same year. Henry Jaques' mother, Lydia Adams, was No. 88, on page 21, of volume II, of The Essex Antiquarian.—Ed.

502. Amos Follansbee was born in Newbury May 7, 1752, being son of Francis and Mary Follansbee. His wife Martha was probably a Newman, as they had a son Newman Follansbee. She died in Newburyport March 21, 1797, at the age of forty-one.—Ed.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A Genealogical Quest. By Wm. C. Low. New York, 1908. In this pamphlet of twenty-one pages Mr. Low gives an account of his unsuccessful attempt to find evidence that Thomas Low of Ipswich was son of Capt. John Low, commander of the ship Ambrose of Winthrop's fleet in 1630.

Wyoming Commemorative Association. Proceedings July 3rd, 1908. Wilkes-Barre, Pa., 1908. This pamphlet of thirty-six pages contains an account of the exercises of the 130th anniversary of the battle and massacre of Wyoming, with the lists of officers and members of the association and the address of Henry Budd, esq., of Philadelphia.

Vital Records of Hamilton, Massachusetts, to the end of the year 1849. Salem, Mass., 1908. This is a book of one hundred and twelve octavo pages, bound in cloth, compiled and published under the provisions of the statute. It includes all records of births, marriages and deaths in the town records and from the cemetery inscriptions, supplemented by church records and private data found in Bibles, etc. The price, postage prepaid, is $1.20. Address the publisher, The Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.

Transactions of the Kansas State Historical Society, 1907-1908. Volume X. Topeka, Kansas, 1908. This great volume of 767 octavo pages of fine type should be commended to every historical society as a specimen of what might and ought to be accomplished. It contains vital records, local sketches, exercises at celebrations, biographies, many articles on the Indians in Kansas, the Wakarusa war, floods, buffalo hunts, passing of cattle trails, personal reminiscences, pioneer merchants, etc. The maps and other illustrations are many,—monuments, portraits, buildings, villages, documents, etc. Both articles and illustrations are too numerous to be specifically mentioned here. The index is exhaustive.

The True Story of the American Flag. By John H. Fow. Philadelphia, 1908. This book of fifty-four pages is the result of an exhaustive study of the subject, and is presented in an array of historical statements. Mr. Fow says: "I have gathered these facts as one would flowers for a bouquet, and have tied them together with a string of my own." It is an interesting and concise history of the evolution of our national emblem, and its first use on land and sea. It is beautifully illustrated with eight full-page plates in color, and gives in all nineteen early American flags. The price is fifty cents in paper and seventy-five, in cloth. Address the publisher, William J. Campbell, 1008 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

DOMESTIC ANIMALS IN THE EARLY DAYS.

ONE of the most important subjects connected with the early settlement of Essex county is that of the domestic animals, which furnished so large a part of the food and clothing of the first settlers. From them were procured various meats, as beef, veal, pork, ham, bacon, lamb, mutton and chicken, and other foods, as milk, cheese, butter and eggs. For clothing, the wool of the sheep was in great demand, and sheep and goat skins were useful in many ways. The hides of oxen, cows and horses were tanned, and the leather used for boots, shoes, saddles, harnesses and many other purposes. For draft uses, oxen and horses, and not infrequently cows, singly in the yoke, were used.

The fishermen at Cape Ann had cattle, and when the removal was made to Naumkeag, in 1626, the cattle were undoubtedly taken with them. In the ship Lion's Whelp, which arrived from England in the spring of 1629, twenty cows and bulls and ten mares and horses were brought.*

In the first general letter of the governor and deputy of the New England company to the governor and council for London's plantation in the Massachusetts Bay, dated at Gravesend April 17, 1629, the writers say: "Such cattle, both horss, mares, cowes, bulls, and goates, as are shipped by M^r^ Craddock, are to be divyded in equall halfes twixt him & the Companie, w^ch^ was omitted to bee done heere for avoyding partiallitie; so yo^w^ must doe it equally there."* The second general letter of the company, dated at London May 28, 1629, states that "The cattle now and formly sent haue bin all pvyded by the Gouno^r^,† excepting 3 mares that came out of Lecestershire; but as well those as all the rest are agreed vpon to bee shipt, the one halfe at the charge and vpon the adventure of the genall Company, the other ½ for the Gouno^r^ and his ptners. And because all occasions shalbe avoyded of iust excepcons in their devision, it is agreed, the devision shalbe made after the arrival there, that soe whatsoever it shall please God to send thither in safety, a devision may bee then made thereof by lott," etc.‡

Sept. 29, 1629, there were twelve cows, three calves, two mares, and two foals belonging to the company, and it was decided that they should be sold rather than kept through the winter.§

July 8, 1635, the general court ordered that a convenient quantity of land be set out in Newbury for the keeping of the sheep and cattle that came over in the Dutch ships that year, to belong to the owners of the cattle.‖

Domestic animals were carried over the early ferries; and the usual fees therefor lings, eleven calves, five horses, six mares, two colts, fourteen swine, eleven young shoats, forty-six ewe sheep and wethers and fourteen lambs.

Swine. The presence of swine was provocative of more laws and contentions than any other animal. They were here as early as 1631, and probably two or three years earlier. May 3, 1631, the general court ordered that all swine found in the corn of any man other than the owner of the animals shall be forfeited to the public, and be applied to the payment of the damages they have done in such fields; and if the damages exceed the value of the swine, their owner must pay the balance.*

Later, it was ordered that, after March 1, 1632-3, the owner of swine which has damaged the corn of another shall pay such damage himself.†

Not only were they injurious in corn fields, but among the fish flakes on which fish were drying at the stages they were equally harmful. In the spring of 1633, it was ordered that if any swine shall, in fishing time, come within a quarter of a mile of the stage of Marble Harbor, they shall be forfeited to the owners of the stage, and the same law applied to all other stages in the colony.‡

July 2, of that summer, it was ordered that any man might kill any swine that came into his corn, the owner of the animal to have its body, first paying for the damage to the corn.§

Nov. 5, 1633, corn that was fit for human consumption was forbidden to be fed to swine; and it was also ordered that each plantation shall agree upon the number of swine any person may keep, winter or summer, about the plantation.‖

All laws relating to swine were repealed May 14, 1634, when it was ordered that each town make their own rules about swine, as they judge best for themselves; but owners of swine remained responsible for damages done by their animals in another town.*

June 3, 1635, it was ordered that no person shall keep pigs more than a month between the last of July and the first of January, under penalty of ten shillings for each pig, half to the informer and half to the public treasury; and no corn could be fed to swine between those dates, except refuse corn and corn brought from other parts, the constable to decide questions about it.†

It was ordered, July 8, 1635, that a pound be made in every plantation, in which to impound swine found in any corn field. Notice of such impounding was to be given to the owner of the animals, if he can be known, or otherwise to be made known at the next lecture. If the swine were not claimed within three days after such notice, the owner of the corn had the animals appraised by two of his neighbors, after which he could sell them, paying himself from the proceeds double damages, which had been determined by two indifferent men. Like recompence was to be made for swine claimed by their owner. The order extended to farms, but not to unfenced parcels of corn of an acre or less, planted remote from town. It was lawful for the owner of the corn to kill the swine, if they could not be impounded, and pay himself the damage, returning the balance to the owner of the animals. If swine escaped from the pound, the owner became liable to pay the damages.‡

Sept. 3, 1635, it was ordered that after the last of the succeeding March, twelve pence apiece must be paid (besides dam-were sixpence each for horses and great cattle, and two pence each for swine, goats, yearling cattle and calves.

The first law relative to damages done in trespass of animals was passed by the general court May 3, 1631. It provided that the owner of cows, horses and goats that trespass and damage the corn of any person other than their owners shall make full satisfaction therefor. Salem was excepted from the operation of the law.*

It was ordered, Nov. 20, 1637, that whoever takes up stray animals shall within three days thereafter give notice to the constable.† In the volumes of town records and county registries of deeds are many entries of estrays.

March 12, 1637-8, it was ordered that all great cattle be herded, and planters of corn must look out for it during the day, but if cattle injure it in the night the owner of the cattle must pay the damage.‡ This law remained in force until Sept. 9, 1639, when it was repealed.§

June 14, 1642, the general court ordered that the corn fields and grass lands be fenced against cattle, that their increase, especially of cows and calves and horses, be not hindered, having greater freedom in roving about, there being so few, and provided for the limitation of liability for damage done to corn or grass by great cattle in corn fields or meadows inclosed in common or otherwise, the person responsible for the weak fence to pay the damage; if the fences were sufficient, the owner of the cattle must answer the damages; and the former law was repealed. The act further provided that if the person injured found the cattle in the act of trespass he could impound them or keep them in his own close or yard till he gave notice to their owner, etc.* Horses, cows and other domestic animals greatly increased during the next five years, and many of them were running about with great freedom, doing much damage in corn fields, etc., notwithstanding fences, so unruly that they could not be caught, or placed in custody, whereby their owners might be compelled to answer for the damages, if, indeed, the owners were known. May 26, 1647, it was provided that each town and peculiar shall have a distinct mark,—a letter or other mark, placed, by means of pitch, etc., on every one of their cattle which feed in the open without a constant keeper, so that it can be known to what place the animals belong. The following were the marks of the towns in Essex county agreed upon with the general court:—

S Salem.
$ Salfburie.
R Rowle.
W Wenham.
L Lin.
I Ipswich.
N Nuberie.
H Haverill.
G Gloster.
M Manchester.
A Andover.†

Later, owners of animals pastured on the commons, had their distinctive marks, made by branding or cutting the hair or slitting or notching one of the ears. These were recorded by the town clerk, usually, in a book kept for that purpose. If animals bearing no such mark trespassed, double damages were collectable. Moreover, if the owner of an animal knew or had been notified that it was "unreason-ble in respect of fences," and allowed it to go upon the common, or against corn fields or other enclosed grounds without sufficient shackles or fetters as might prevent their trespassing, or if a horse or other beast trespassed in corn or other enclosure, which was securely fenced against cows, oxen and orderly cattle, the person damaged must procure two inhabitants of the town of good report and credit to view and determine the amount of the damage, which the owner of the animal must pay, etc.*

Pound. These laws necessitated the establishment in each town of the ancient pound, or, in the Anglo-Saxon, "pund," a public enclosure for the safe custody of animals found straying or doing damage as trespassers. Several of the towns built pounds without delay, but others were backward. In towns they are still maintained, though little use is made of them. The frontispiece shows the pound in South Peabody, which is one of the best in the county. They were about forty feet square, and fenced with stone wall. Many of the modern pounds have a high wooden fence around them.

A pound keeper, as he was called, was chosen by the town to have charge of the pound and the animals impounded, feeding and watering them. This was usually some man living in the vicinity.

To prevent resistance in taking and driving animals to the pound and "pund breche," as the Anglo-Saxons called it, that is, taking them out of the pound, the general court, Nov 11, 1647, made it a criminal offence, punishable by fine or whipping. If the owner of the animals was an abettor, he was punished as a principal.*

Field drivers and haywards were chosen later.

Oxen, Cows, etc. The cattle of the Dorchester company at Cape Ann, 1623-1626, were probably cows, bulls, heifers and calves, and they were undoubtedly taken, either by water or land, to Naumkeag, in the latter year. Others were sent over in 1629. The twenty cows and bulls, which came in the ship Lion's Whelp, were valued at four pounds each.*

Oxen were used for draft purposes, in the field and forest and on the road.

In the early days, cows were pastured on the common, generally in charge of a cowherd, who was appointed by the town. He drove them to the grazing ground in the morning, returning with them at night to the "pen," where each owner could receive his animals and drive them home.

Horses. These animals were taken from England to the new land as early as 1629, the ten mares and horses on the ship Lion's Whelp, that year, being valued at six pounds each.* Some of the mares that were brought over that year came from Leicester, in England. There were, also, colts among them.

In 1649, the general court forbade the exportation of mares, upon penalty of forfeiture, one-half to the informer and one-half to the public;† but, Oct. 14, 1656, the law was repealed, as the other colonies allowed it.‡

Horses were used, in the earliest days, principally for horseback riding.

Generally, one horse only would be found on an ordinary place. In the inventory of the estate of John Ward of Ipswich, dated March 21, 1656, are named one old bay mare with a foal, one young mare with a foal, two two-year-old mares, one year-old colt, the bald horse and the bay horse, and no other animals, except two cows. John Porter, sr., of Salem had a large farm; and at his death, in 1676, he was possessed of eight oxen, two three-year-old steers, bull, fifteen cows, nine two-year-old cattle, eight year-ages and charges of keeping) for each swine taken without a keeper within a mile of any plantation, or farms improved by tillage, by the owner of the animals to any one who should impound them. Swine so impounded were cried at the next two lectures, and if not claimed within three days thereafter, it was lawful for the impounder to have them appraised and to sell them, delivering the overplus of the money into the next coutr.*

Notwithstanding all these laws and regulations, great damage was sustained every year by swine going at liberty; and it was ordered, Oct. 26, 1636, that if any swine be found abroad out of its owner's yard, or other inclosure, or out of some island, unless some person have them in restraint, by a line or otherwise, they shall be accounted wild swine, and any man can take them, alive or dead. Each town was obliged to choose yearly a discreet person, "who shalbee called the hogreeve," who shall have power to seize all such swine, and to account of all that shall be seized by any person. Every swine so seized had to be valued by two neighbors and sold, one-half of the proceeds being payable to the colony and the other half to the person seizing them; and the hogreeve had one-tenth of each swine that he notified the treasurer had been seized by any other person. All former laws relating to swine were repealed.† December 13, following, the order was suspended for six months for such swine as were found ringed.‡ A ring in the snout of a hog prevented it from rooting, which was apparently one of the principal objectionable features of a stray.

March 9, 1636-7, it was ordered that all swine shall be kept in yards or islands, or committed to keepers, under penalty of ten shillings for each animal not so disposed of, or found at large, and if it be taken in corn or in a meadow five shillings apiece shall be forfeited to the impounder, and the owner of the animal shall pay double damages for the harm done by it. If the swine could not be impounded, it was lawful to kill it; and five shillings for each animal was paid to the person so killing it, and the remainder to the owner, if known, otherwise to the treasurer for the public.*

All existing laws relating to swine were repealed Nov. 20, 1637; afterward each town was to make orders for preventing harm done by swine in corn, meadow, pasture, or garden, and were given power to impose penalties to any reasonable value. In the matter of damages the whole procedure was changed. Thereafter the town should pay, recovering from the owner the amount of the damage, etc. If swine in one town trespassed into another town, through want of ringing or yoking, the town to which they belonged must make satisfaction and answer the fine; but if the animals were ringed, the town where the trespass was done, because of want of sufficient fencing, was liable, such town to collect from the owner.†

Sept. 6, 1638, all former swine laws were repealed, and it was ordered that any swine found within two miles of any meeting house (except the premises of its owner), without a sufficient keeper, or found within another's corn field, garden, or pasture, its owner shall forfeit it; and whoever killed it or took it alive had to have it appraised by two freemen of the same town, and the damages being first satisfied, the rest went, one-half to the party and half to a common stock for the good of the town where it was taken. Reproaching or finding fault with any person for seizing or killing any swine, according to law, was made a criminal offence.‡ Men in those days spoke freely, and appeared in court from time to time to answer to complaints of this sort.

The yoking of swine was to prevent them from getting through or over fences.

The forfeiture of swine, provided for as above, became inoperative by an order of the general court March 13, 1638-9.*

Swineherds were appointed by towns to take swine to feeding grounds and have the care of them. The animals fed upon acorns, grubs, roots, etc. Those near the flats, where clams were found, after they had learned to root for and eat clams, waited for the tide to recede that they might go upon the flats and feed upon the clams.

Sheep. Some of these desirable animals were brought to Newbury in Dutch ships in 1635, and others probably were imported earlier.

The number of sheep was limited, and wool was consequently scarce and dear. It was very much wanted for winter clothing; and for this reason the general court sought to increase the production of these animals. May 14, 1645, they desired all towns to preserve and enlarge their flocks. Each town was requested to appoint a man to learn what persons would purchase ewes and the number they would take, reporting to the court, which would send abroad for them; also to write to friends in England who thought of emigrating to Massachusetts Bay to bring as many sheep as they could.†

To still further promote this branch of husbandry, Oct. 18, 1648, it was ordered that any man may keep sheep on any common, whether it is cow, ox or other common, belonging to the town where such person lives, or where at that time he has a right to common, without limitation in unrestricted commons and in restricted commons to keep his proportion of five sheep to one great animal. If a dog killed a sheep, the owner must hang his dog forthwith or pay double damages; and if such owner had had notice that the dog had been seen to course or bite sheep before, he must hang his dog and pay for the sheep. If the owner refuses to hang his dog, the constable must forthwith cause it to be done.*

Aug. 22, 1654, sheep were forbidden to be exported.†

Shepherds were not unknown here in the early days.

Goats. These animals were brought over in 1629. They were much more common in Essex county in the first settlement than they have been since. Inventories of the earlier estates frequently mention them.

March 9, 1636-7, the general court ordered that double damages shall be allowed for injury done by goats; and any goat taken in corn or gardens may be kept and used by the person damaged till full satisfaction be made by the owner of the animal.‡

Goats were driven out to pasture and tended by the goatherd, who was appointed by the town, owners of the animals paying him so much per head for his services.

Dogs. These companions of men came very early to New England. They were in Salem in 1635, and probably from the first English settlement.

For the destruction of wolves, the town of Salem voted, Nov. 10, 1645, that four or half-a-dozen braches or hounds be brought from England at the expense of the town.§ Oct. 18, 1648, the general court ordered that the selectmen of every town shall procure as many hounds as they think meet, and impose the keeping of them on such as they think fittest, for destruction of wolves; and no other dogs shall be kept in any town except with the permission of its selectmen.‖

Poultry. Poultry is rarely mentioned in the early records, though hens were here in the early settlement, being the subject of a town order in Salem in 1635; and, in 1637, Peter Palfrey's servant, Jane Wheat, was convicted of killing his neighbor's poultry.*

Beneath this Hofpitable shade, in the calm Regions of the dead Lays low; Deaths Prisoner detain'd; A tender sympathizing friend, a kind companion ever dear, Pause Reader, and let fall a tear On the dear urn that lie below and learn
What man is loth to know,
When Lifes moft dazling Profpects rise
The scene concludes in,
Here He Lies.

Here Lyes the Body of Mr Nathaniel Lord who Died August 10th 1770
Aged 83 Years

ERECTED
in Memory of
Mr. Nathaniel Lord
Junr who departed
this Life Sept 22d 1794,
in the 73d year of his age.

Beneath this ftone, death's prif'ner lies,
The ftone fhall move, the prif'ner rife;
When Jefus with almighty, word,
Calls his dead faints to meet the Lord.

So fleep the faints, & cease to groan,
When fin & death have done their worft,
Chrift hath a glory like his own
Which waits to cloath the waking duft.

aged 73 years.

Slight not thofe joys Heav'n's bounty doth beftow, Purfuing what was never found (below;
So many ills in ftormy life abound,
In Heaven alone true happine/s is (found.

The toile of life & pangs of death are o'er
And care & pain & sicknefs are no more

They both were Plain & unaffected in their Manners fteady & Refalute in their Conduct Humane, temperate, Just & Bountiful.

Love
Death can't difjoin, whom Christ hath joined in Life leads to death, & death to life above
In Heaven's a happier place frail things difpife
Live well to gain in futur life the prize

And all our Bones fhall fay Lord

In Memory of
The Rev. Nathaniel Rogers; who was more than 47 years, a faithful & beloved Paſtor of the firſt Church & Congregation in this place: Colleague the firſt 18 years, with his venerable Father, the Rev. John Rogers of precious memory, whoſe duſt lies near: Alone in office after, until death tranſlated him to the high reward of his labors. He ſlept in Jeſus, May 10^th A. D. 1775. Æt. 74.

A mind profoundly great; a heart that felt
The ties of nature, friendſhip & humanity;
Diſtinguiſh'd wiſdom, dignity of manners,
Theſe mark'd the Man: but with ſuperior grace
The Chriſtian ſhone, in faith & heav'nly zeal,
Sweet peace, true goodneſs, and prevailing pray'r.

Dear Man of God! with what ſtrong agonies
He wreſtled for his flock—and for the world!
And like Apollos mighty in the ſcriptures,
Open'd the myſteries of love divine
And the great name of Jeſus!

Warm from his lips the heav'nly doctrine fell:
And numbers reſcu'd from the jaws of hell,
Shall hail him bleſt in realms of light unknown,
And add immortal luſtre to his crown.

*Scaled off.

Why fhould we mourn departed friends?
Or fhake at death's alarms?
'Tis but the voice that Jefus fends
To call them to his arms.
Are we not tending upward too
As faft as time can move?
Nor would we wifh the hours more flow
To keep us from our Love.
Why fhoud we tremble to convey
Their bodies to the tomb?
There the dear flefh of Jefus lay
And left a long perfume.
The graves of all his faints be blefs'd,
And foft'ned ev'ry bed:
Where fhould the dying members reft
But with their dying Head?

SALEM IN 1700. NO. 35.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on the opposite page represents that part of Salem lying between Loring avenue and the bay and from Forest river northwesterly about a third of a mile. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of six hundred feet to an inch. It shows the location of the only house that was standing there in 1700. The dotted lines show where Lafayette street now runs. It was the road to Marblehead which was laid out in 1737, accounts of which have been given. Originally, it ran along the shore around the point in front of the residence of Hon. John M. Raymond. The land damages occasioned by the laying out of this road were met by the grant of the South field hill, shown on the map, to the owners of the several lots of land through which it passed. The line with the dashes across it show where the Marblehead branch of the Boston & Maine Railroad now runs.

Loring avenue was the old way to Marblehead, having been laid out in 1666, as described in a former article. It was called the highway as it goes toward Marblehead in 1676; highway to Marblehead, 1713; ye country road leading to Marblehead, 1719; ye road leading through South field to Marblehead, 1734; the old road so called to Marblehead, 1773; the road leading to Forest river bridge so called and Salem hospital, 1777; and Loring avenue since 1881.

The water on the east was called Forest river as early as 1666; ye water or harbor, 1669; the river, 1692; ye sea or salt water, 1708; cove or river, 1791; Salem harbor, 1812; and the harbor, 1829.

Forest river has been so called since 1636, at least. Its Indian name was Massabequash.

The creek running out of Forest river was called Mouser's cove in 1656, probably because John Mouser owned land upon it very early; and was called creek or branch of Forest river in 1730.

William Reeves Lot. This was a part of the lot of Daniel Baxter. It subsequently belonged to John Reeves of Salem as early as 1652. Mr. Reeves died in 1681, having devised this part of his lot to his son William Reeves, who owned it in 1700.

Ephraim Kempton Lot. This was a part of the five-acre lot of Daniel Baxter. It subsequently belonged to John Reeves of Salem, as early as 1652. Mr. Reeves died in 1681, having devised this portion to his daughter Mary's husband, Ephraim Kempton of Salem, a locksmith. He owned it in 1700.

Edward Flint Lot. This lot belonged to Daniel Baxter of Salem, seaman, before 1645, when the half-acre of marsh at the north end of it was granted to him. He conveyed the whole lot to William Flint of Salem 12 : 3 mo : 1653.* Mr. Flint died, possessed of it, Feb. 2, 1672-3, having devised it to his son Edward Flint. It was then appraised at twelve pounds. It belonged to Edward Flint in 1700.

Samuel Gardner Lot. Henry True owned this lot very early. He owned it in 1653; and probably conveyed that part of it lying easterly of the dashes soon after. It came into the possession of Samuel Gardner. Mr. True died in 165–, possessed of that part of the lot lying westerly of the dashes; and his administratrix conveyed it to George Gardner of Salem, merchant, 22 : 9 : 1659.* Lieutenant Gardner died Aug. 20, 1679, having devised this part of the lot to his son Samuel, who owned the other part.

*Broken.

PART OF SALEM IN 1700. NO. 35.

There were three small lots at the southern corner of this lot, shown on the map within the dashes. Henry True owned the middle one, and it was conveyed by the administratrix of his estate in the deed above-mentioned. The other lots were owned at that time (1659) by Samuel Archer and Goodman Skerry.

Samuel Gardner owned the entire lot in 1700.

Benjamin Browne Lot. This lot of meadow or marsh land early belonged to William Lord. He owned it probably as early as 1659. It belonged to Benjamin Browne in 1700.

John Holmes Lot. This lot was early known as "Mowser's," having probably belonged to John Mousar, and perhaps granted to him in 1639. Thomas Browning died, possessed of it, in the spring of 1671, having devised his land to his sons-in-law Joseph Williams and Isaac Meachum. They divided the estate 17 : 2 : 1675, and this lot was assigned to Mr. Meachum.† Mr. Meachum lived in Endfield, Mass., Nov. 14, 1693, when he conveyed this lot to Samuel Gardner of Salem.‡ For twenty-seven pounds Mr. Gardner conveyed it to John Holmes of Salem April 9, 1694;§ and Mr. Holmes died, possessed of it, in 1718.

Southfield Hill. This hill was reserved by the Southfield proprietors when the lands in this section were divided in the early days. When the new highway (now Lafayette street) was laid out from the present Normal school to the lead mills on Forest river, in 1737, the proprietors granted this hill to the owners of land over which the new road was laid out. This hill was hired for many years of the Southfield proprietors by John Holmes and after his death by his son Benjamin Holmes, before its grant in 1737.

John Holmes House. John Holmes was a yeoman and lived in Salem on the lot about 1676. When the house that stood here in 1700 was built is not known, but probably about 1676. Mr. Holmes died in 1718, and the house and land descended to his son Benjamin Holmes, who was a husbandman, and lived here. The house was probably taken down before 1750.

Edward Flint Lot. This lot was owned by William Flint very early. He died Feb. 2, 1672-3, possessed of it. His sons Edward and Thomas Flint, divided the estate Dec. 3, 1694; and this lot was assigned to Edward.† Edward Flint owned it in 1700.

Thomas Flint Lot. This lot was owned by William Flint very early. He died Feb. 2, 1672-3, possessed of it. His sons Edward and Thomas Flint, divided the estate Dec. 3, 1694; and this lot was assigned to Thomas,† who owned it in 1700.

THE GRAVES OF THE PATRIOTS.

BY J. G. PERCIVAL.

Here rest the great and good—here they repose
After their generous toil. A sacred band,
They take their sleep together, while the year
Comes with its early flowers to deck their graves
And gather them again, as Winter frowns.
Theirs is no vulgar sepulchre; green sods
Are all their monument; and yet it tells
A nobler history than pillared piles,
Or the eternal pyramids. They need
No statue nor inscription to reveal
Their greatness. It is round them; and the joy
With which their children tread the hallowed ground
That holds their venerated bones, the peace
That smiles on all they fought for, and the wealth
That clothes the land they rescued,—these, though mute,
As feeling ever is when deepest,—these
Are monuments more lasting than the fanes
Reared to the kings and demigods of old.

SUFFOLK COUNTY DEEDS.

VOLUME VIII.

The following are abstracts of all records in volume VIII of the Suffolk county registry of deeds relating to Essex county persons and property, where parties are given as residing, or property is mentioned as being located in Essex county. The records in this volume cover the period from 1672 to 1674.

ANSWERS.

354. In the Spofford Genealogy Hannah, daughter of Samuel and Jemima (Freethe) Spofford, born in Rowley Dec. 22, 1716, is said to have married "—— Wood, of Bradford." This is evidently a mistake, for the Spofford that married a Wood belonged to another family. The estate of Samuel Spofford was not settled in the probate court, and positive evidence of her husband's name is not therefore attainable from that source; and, indeed, if the estate had been administered in court, probably Hannah would not have been mentioned, if she is the Hannah Spofford who married Robert Craig (or more properly Grag or Gragg) in Bradford Dec. 4, 1735, both being of Rowley, as she and her child died on the same day, Jan. 2, 1737-8. This is the only Hannah who is qualified to be this Hannah. Robert Grag was a witness to the will of her uncle, John Spofford of Rowley, in the year of his marriage to Hannah. The home of all of these people was the west parish of Rowley, which was incorporated as the town of Georgetown in 1838.—Ed.

384. Mary Martin of Marblehead who married Richard Whittemore Dec. 23, 1792, was a daughter of Capt. Knott Martin, jr., of Marblehead. Her mother was Elizabeth Bowen, daughter of Nathan Bowen, esq., of Marblehead, whose family record is given in The Essex Antiquarian, volume X, page 57. Mary Martin was baptized in Marblehead, in St. Michael's (Episcopal) church, Dec. 1, 1765. Her father was a coaster. Her mother died in Marblehead July 28, 1809, at the age of seventy-four; and Captain Martin married, secondly, Mercy (Brooks), widow of John Martin, Jan. 20, 1810. Capt. Knott Martin died in Marblehead July 7, 1822, at the age of eighty-seven years and six months. His wife Mercy survived him, and died, his widow, April 21, 1832, aged "eighty-three."—Ed.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Vital Records of Essex, Massachusetts, to the end of the year 1849. Salem, Mass., 1908. This is a book of eighty-six octavo pages, bound in cloth, and compiled and published under the provisions of the statute. It includes all records of births, marriages and deaths in the town records and from the cemetery inscriptions and private records. The price, postage prepaid, is ninety five cents. Address the publisher, The Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.

Inscriptions from the Ancient Gravestones of Acworth, N. H. Claremont, N. H., 1908. This is a transcript of the records in the old cemetery of Acworth, N. H., which was settled in 1769, principally by descendants of the Scotch-Irish colony of Londonderry, N. H. The copies were made by Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Spofford of Claremont. Mr. Spofford has printed them, together with a list of the Acworth soldiers in the Revolution, in a pamphlet of twenty-four octavo pages, which he will send to any one on receipt of fifty cents.

Exercises at the Dedication of the Peters' Hill Memorial at Wenham Lake October 25, 1908. Wenham, Mass., 1908. Rev. Hugh Peters, pastor of the church in Salem, preached a sermon on a little hill at Wenham lake about 1638, being the first religious service ever conducted in that part of Salem called Enon in 1643, when it became a town. The hill has been dug away, and near its site a boulder was placed, on which is a bronze tablet stating the fact of the sermon.

The Merchants National Bank, Salem, Mass. An Historical Sketch. By Albert W. Dennis. Salem, Mass., 1908. This is a history of the old bank, which has been engaged in business in Salem since 1811, and never more flourishing than it is to-day. This volume of sixty-five quarto pages, artistically bound, gives its history in detail. There are many plates, of its home-buildings, inside and out, its past and present corporate seals, its various issues of bills and checks, portriats of its nine presidents and other officers, past and present. The book is unique and well prepared, and gives tone to the bank, which it illustrates so well.

Historical Collections of the Topsfield Historical Society. Volume XIII. Topsfield, Mass., 1908. This, the thirteenth volume of printed books of the Topsfield Historical Society, contains one hundred and sixty-eight octavo pages. The leading article is a history of the post-office in Topsfield and of its postmasters; and among the number of other papers, Topsfield in the Witchcraft Delusion and Descendants of John French of Topsfield are particularly valuable. Of the four portraits contained in the volume the most important is that of Dr. Nehemiah Cleaveland, which constitutes the frontispiece.

THE TAVERNS AND TURNPIKES OF BLANDFORD, 1733-1833. By Rev. Sumner Gilbert Wood. Blandford, Mass., 1908. This is an attractive volume, bound in buckram, and contains three hundred and fifty small octavo pages. The author is the pastor of the Congregational church in that town, and in love with the antiquities of his locality.

The town was settled in 1735 by a colony of Scotch-Irish, and was located on the main highway of the province between Boston and Albany; and so has a richer store of tavern and stage-coach lore than most towns. Probably no branch of local history is more attractive than that relating to staging and tavern life; and Mr. Wood tells the story in such a manner that the book is interesting to the reader, who may never have seen Blandford.

The volume is finely illustrated. There is a map of the original layout of the town, but most of the remaining fifty engravings are in half-tone printed in brown ink in an artistic manner. They include landscapes, old roads, taverns and residences, inside and out, meeting-house, views of the village, etc.

The mechanical part of the book is of the best kind; and in every part of the volume taste is happily displayed. A good index is not its least useful feature.

The price is two dollars. Address the author at Blandford, Mass.

A HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES AND ITS PEOPLE from their Earliest Records to the Present Time. By Elroy McKendree Avery. Volume V. Cleveland, O., 1908. Another volume of this beautiful work has been issued. In many ways this is the best of the five. The mechanical excellence and especially its typographical superiority is not surpassed by the previous volumes.

This section begins with the period succeeding the French and Indian war, and ends with the beginning of the Revolution, in 1776. The principal subjects are the stamp act, the tea episode, the provincial and continental congresses, beleaguered Boston, the Northern campaign, early months of the war, and the Declaration of Independence.

The illustrations increase in number in each successive volume apparently, and this contains several hundred. The frontispiece is a color portrait of Samuel Adams, and in fact this volume contains more color prints than either of the earlier issues. There are engravings of many houses, advertisements, documents and wall paper. Many of the articles in the Essex Institute at Salem are illustrated, as the wooden plow used at Boxford on the morning of April 19, 1775, axe used about 1750, a boy's shoe worn previous to the Revolution, loom, reel, saddle bags in which Mrs. Ruth Curtis of Boxford carried food and powder to her husband at the battle of Bunker hill, watch and chain, spectacles, foot-stove, warming pan, steelyards, old panniers, one horse chaise, candle-mold, pre-Revolutionary pistol, etc. Among the portraits are those of Gov. Joseph Wanton of Rhode Island, Gov. Francis Bernard, James Otis, Peter Faneuil, Isaac Barre, Patrick Henry, John Dickinson, George III., Queen Charlotte, Lord North, Thomas Hutchinson, Lord Mansfield, Earl of Dartmouth, Thomas Cushing, Benjamin Franklin, Lord Dunmore, Joseph Warren, Earl Percy, Paul Revere, Edmund Burke, Ethan Allen, Israel Putnam, John Burgoyne, Benedict Arnold, Thomas Paine and John Hancock. There are also many autographs, title-pages, revenue stamps, maps and plans, furniture and household utensils, coats-of-arms, apparel, money, etc.

This volume contains four hundred and thirty-two pages, having at its end the usual bibliography of the period. Sixteen volumes in all are promised by the publishers, The Burrows Brothers Company, Cleveland, O.

THE PRE-HISTORIC RELICS OF ESSEX COUNTY.

BY JOHN ROBINSON.

THE age and origin of the thousands of pre-historic implements, commonly known as Indian relics, which are found in all parts of Essex county, in graves, in shellheaps and just beneath the surface of the fields, are questions often asked and variously answered. This article was prepared for a meeting of the Essex Institute and is based on the study of the large collection of pre-historic relics of Essex county in the Peabody museum in Salem and upon the accounts of early local writers and recent works on the pre-historic races of north-eastern America.

The original peopling of this country must remain a matter of speculation. The most reasonable theory would seem to be that the primitive man came from Europe through the northern regions in remotely early time, before the glacial period. That these early inhabitants were then forced southward by the progress of the ice sheet; that those who pushed far to the south became more highly developed in the arts and in culture generally, while those who remained in the northern and mountain regions retained their primitive ways. With the recession of the ice the north gradually became repeopled from the immediate south, the stream of population spreading out in several directions. Of course, local gatherings or tribes began to develop distinctive characters; there were continual oscillations, back and forth over the land, migrations and wars,—and the comingling again of once separated tribes.

A study of the so-called shellheaps of Essex county is of much interest and offers opportunity for many speculations as to the people who left us these waste piles, the only relic of their domestic life.

It has been thought by some writers that the ancient Eskimo at one time occupied this region and were living even farther south and that we had here the relics of two races or groups of pre-historic people. This theory is now generally held and, therefore, it is probable that all of the pre-historic objects found here were the handiwork of one race and that the ruder and more highly finished objects found intermingled in surface collections merely indicate a different condition of the development of this race or, possibly, of different individuals of that race at practically the same period. Of the greatest importance, therefore, is the study of the shellheaps and graves, for only by the study of these may any estimate be made of the age of most of the objects found. The objects found in great quantities in the fields and by the shores of ponds and streams are interesting solely as forms of implements and cannot be assigned to any period except by comparison with the objects from graves and shellheaps.

The shellheaps, found more frequently at Ipswich than in any other part of the county, and, of course, near the salt flats, are generally composed of clam shells thrown in piles near some permanent or temporary camping ground and with these are mingled the refuse, broken implements, pottery, meat bones, etc., of the household, precisely as would be found in our own ash piles. Occasionally oyster shells are found with the clam shells and in a few instances the heaps are composed almost wholly of oyster shells.

It is probable that these latter are the oldest, one very interesting example of which was opened on Perkins island at the mouth of the Ipswich river and is described in the Bulletin of the Essex Institute at page 158 of volume fourteen. It was composed entirely of oyster shells and some very old forms of clam shells and, also, included human bones broken up and found in a compact mass as if turned out of a pot, indicating, as stated by Prof. F. W. Putnam, that cannibalism was practised by the natives at that remote period.

Passing on to the time when the prehistoric merges into the historical period we find, about the year 1500, that the Algonkin tribes extended from the Savannah river to the straits of Belle Isle and west to Lake Superior. The Algonkins surrounded the Iroquois who were at Montreal and in central New York, with a branch, the Hurons, at Georgian bay. The Iroquois built communal houses, were more cultured and had some ideas of government, as shown by the Hiawatha confederation. The Algonkins on the other hand were more primitive in their ways, lived in huts surrounded by palisades and made ruder implements; they surrounded the Iroquois and were in contact with them on either side.

The Algonkins worshipped light and the four winds and their totems in animal form represented personal gods who could, through the animal, do the owner some good turn. To another person or tribe this same animal might not be sacred. A carved head of wood was sometimes carried by an individual and this and possibly a carved post were their only idols. Carved stone faces from two to five inches long have been found in New Hampshire, New York, New Jersey and elsewhere and carved stone representations of animals have also been found in graves and among the surface relics in several parts of Essex county. At death these primitive people believed that they would go to the realms of eternal bliss by the route of the milky-way.

Until this time, about the year 1500, or the time of the discovery by Columbus, —the distribution of the races in North America was purely a natural one, unaffected by outside influences. But now comes the first European voyagers and in an ever-increasing stream, forming a period extending over a little more than a century to the time of the permanent settlement of the country,—from Cabot to the Mayflower.

The coming of the Norsemen need not be considered as an influence in the condition of the native races in this part of the country,—if anywhere in North America. Eric was in Greenland in 982 and in 985 that country was settled by Norwegians. In the year 1000 Norsemen sailed southward along the Atlantic coast. The most eminent students who have written on this subject, historians and archæologists,—Windsor, Fiske, MacLean of Illinois, Reeves of Cincinnati, L. G. Power of Nova Scotia and others consider, even accepting the legends of the Norse sagas as facts, although they are quite generally looked upon as largely romantic,—that the most southerly point which could have been reached was Labrador or New Foundland. The whole length and breadth of the North Atlantic coast from Maine to Virginia have been dug over and re-dug for nearly three centuries and not a single authentic Scandinavian relic has ever been found. The old stone mill at Newport, heralded as a Norse baptistry, was undoubtedly built by Governor Arnold about 1676, a close copy of one near his old home in Chesterton, England. Dighton rock and the rocks in Rhode Island and Newbury, Mass., once thought to have Norse legends carved upon them are now known to simply bear Algonkian inscriptions. The "skeleton in armor," found near Fall River, was the exaggerated story of a few pieces of copper found with the skeleton of an ordinary Algonkin native, buried within the historic period, and similar burials with pieces of copper have been unearthed at Manchester and Revere, Mass. The Greenland settlement had been entirely wiped out of existence by 1642. The only possible connection between the Norsemen and Eskimo may be found in the influence of Norse legends in Eskimo tales.

But the influence of the early voyagers upon the material life of the natives was very great. John Cabot discovered New Foundland in 1497. Cortereal came there in 1517 and the fishermen in 1517, for there were fifty vessels of various nationalities in New Foundland waters at that date. In 1522, New Foundland probably had a settlement of fifty houses of the fishermen. In 1535, Jacques Cartier sailed up the St. Lawrence river and discovered the Iroquois town of Hocheloga and named it Montreal. A French settlement was attempted in 1542-1543. In 1557, there were engaged in the New Foundland fisheries one hundred vessels from Spain, fifty from Portugal, one hundred and fifty from France and fifty from England, while thirty ships were near Iceland looking for whales. In 1579, a trading ship of three hundred tons came from England and made a profitable voyage—a ship much larger than many of the famous old Salem craft which two centuries later carried our name and the American flag to the most distant ports. Sir Humphrey Gilbert found thirty-six vessels in St. John harbor in 1583, and the French had renewed their trade with Canada two years before. Virginia Dare, the first child of English parents born in northeastern America, saw the light at Roanoke, Virginia, August 18, 1587. Vessels were plying continually along the whole coast. Gosnold named Cape Cod and Martha's Vineyard in 1602, Martin Pring was at New England in 1603 for sassafras and, in the same year, Champlain gave us the map of Gloucester harbor with "the wigwams of the savages" drawn in the sketch and so inscribed. John Smith explored this region in 1614, the permament settlement quickly followed and the white man was at Virginia, Plymouth, Salem, Boston and elsewhere to New Foundland and Montreal. And the white man found the Algonkins of this region practically exterminated.

Looking over this list of voyagers who had for a century sailed about the waters of the north Atlantic, continually meeting and trading with the natives, it does not require much imagination to determine from whom the natives obtained the copper ship kettles, iron tools, brass, the so-called copper armor, pipes, beads, etc., of European make which we find in ancient graves and in the shellheaps. It is quite safe to say that all such objects are from two hundred and sixty to three hundred and fifty years old, in individual cases, from certain data we may guess more nearly their exact age.

For a region occupied by a nomadic people, up to 1615 this part of the country was densely populated. There were more inhabitants at Agawam (Ipswich) than at Naumkeag (Salem),—a statement verified by the fact that many more prehistoric relics are found at Ipswich than in the neighborhood of Salem, thus giving silent endorsement to tradition and the stories of the early voyagers. There were, it is said, multitudes of people seen on the shores while abundant corn fields waved their tassels through the late summer. It is estimated that there were forty thousand inhabitants in New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, mostly located near the coast, the more readily to obtain food,—fish and clams as well as woodland game,—and because it is supposed that they were contracted to defend themselves from the five nations of Iroquois with whom they were at war.

The Algonkin tribes from Maine were also in the habit of making raids in this direction to obtain supplies. They were fierce warriors and did not cultivate the land so extensively as the tribes of this region. In 1615, they made a terrible onslaught killing great numbers of the Massachusetts Indians. In 1617-1618, thousands more died of a pestilence which followed the war and in 1619 the relentless Tarrentines again came down finishing the work of destruction already nearly completed. It was during this last raid that Nanepashemet, the ruler of the Massachusetts tribes was killed in his stronghold at Medford on the Mystic. Thus, so say the Plymouth colonial records, "Almighty God in his goodness prepared the country for the whites." The leaders among the early settlers looked upon this wholesale slaughter of the natives by war and pestilence as a beneficent interposition of a divine providence to provide them with the land needed for their occupation without cost or trouble. Although there were some who felt a certain responsibility for the christian treatment of the natives, this belief of divine interposition held for two hundred years. It was taught in our schools and finally became the key note of our unjust national Indian policy.

After the death of Nanepashemet, Montowampate ruled over Lynn, Salem and Marblehead, then known as Saugus, Naumkeag and Masabequash. He married a daughter of Pasaconaway, the old high priest of the tribes of the region, and after some domestic difficulties, similar to those we read about in our modern court reports, he died in 1633. Later, Wenepoyken, the youngest son of Nanepashemet, appears to have claimed this territory. He died in 1684. Poquanum, a contemporary of Nanepashemet, was the local ruler at Nahant, followed by Manatahqua. These names are variously spelt and each chief received some name from the English, such as Black Will, Sagamore George, James Rumney-marsh, etc. Masconomo ruled at Agawam (Ipswich) in the early days of the settlement.

In the city hall at Salem hangs an ancient parchment, the deed of the land the city occupies, purchased from the descendants of Nanepashemet in 1686 for twenty pounds. On the lower margin of the deed are the signatures of ten of his grandchildren and great-grandchildren or their representatives, and one son of the great chief. We may see here the handwriting of some of the native Indians who may have handled or even possible made some of the objects perserved in our museum collections, objects which we may ourselves handle. It is quite possible that some of the wampum in the museum collection may have come from the grave of one of the signers of this old Salem Indian deed. As late as 1633, John Wonohaquaham, a son of Nanepashemet, dying in Chelsea, left his lands at Powderhorn hill to his son, or to his brother George (Wenepoyken) if his son should be dead, and much wampum to the governor and to his people. He was a good man and bequeathed his son to the care of the Rev. Mr. Wilson of Boston. Of course, some wampum was buried with him and it is quite possible that the specimens of wampum referred to in the museum collection may have belonged to him for they were found in a grave very near Powderhorn hill, just beyond the Essex county line.

In conclusion: It is most probable, since the natives had very largely disappeared when this part of the country was settled, that all objects, included as prehistoric relics, found in Essex county, ante-date the year 1620,—the year after the last Tarrentine invasion. As a primitive race gives up its implements of stone almost immediately on coming in contact with a race more advanced for implements of iron or copper, it is probable that comparatively few stone implements were made by natives of this region after the year 1550. But little mention is made of stone implements in early colonial accounts of the natives notwithstanding so many are found in graves and in the fields throughout the county. These stone implements must generally be three hundred and fifty years old; many may be very much older.

The oldest shellheaps,—those composed principally of oyster shells,—undoubtedly contain the remains of the earliest and most primitive inhabitants and may be six hundred years old and, possibly, one thousand.

There is no evidence so far produced of paleolithic implements found in Essex county, that is, there are no indications of human occupation in pre-glacial times.

Whatever may have been the origin of the people who left the so-called "Indian relics" behind, there is no doubt that the materials from which the stone axes, gouges, celts, sinkers, arrow and spear points and the soapstone and pottery cooking vessels were made, came from the rock and clay formations of Essex county. Few of the objects of aboriginal make show evidence of being brought from any great distance, except perhaps some specimens of pottery which may have come from Vermont and wampum which may have been made by the Narragansetts of Rhode Island. Even the soapstone pipes similar to some found in Ohio mounds are matched in material by Essex county soapstone. The Tarrentines may have left some weapons or ornaments behind them in their raids although they came to plunder and not to trade. But most of such objects would be quite like those made here on account of the same materials, felsite, quartz, etc., being used for arrow and spear points in Essex county and in Maine, even if iron weapons were not more in use than stone at the time of the invasion. One object only in the collection of the Salem museum, a pierced stone ornament, can be positively identified as coming from the east, it was made of rock material not known nearer than Mt. Kineo, Maine.

Practically, therefore, the pre-historic relics of Essex county and such objects as are usually arranged with them may be classified as follows: A few are the relics of the earliest primitive inhabitants and may be one thousand years old; the majority are Algonkian of local workmanship and were made from Essex county rocks or other native materials, nearly all prior to the year 1620. The objects of foreign introduction are European, and were brought here not earlier than the year 1500 and very few of them later than the year 1630.

WILL OF ANDREW HODGES.

The will of Andrew Hodges of Ipswich was proved in the court at Ipswich Jan. 27, 1666. The following copy is transcribed from the original instrument on file in the office of the clerk of courts at Salem, volume XI, leaf 96.

45

JOSEPH BROWN[4], born in Lynn March 20, 1730. He lived in Lynn, and married Esther Meriam Oct. 15, 1751. She died in Lynn Sept. 12, 1765; and he married, second, Hannah Ramsdell May 15, 1766. They were living in Lynn in 1786.

Children, born in Lynn:—

58—I. SAMUEL[5], b. July 13, 1752.
59—II. JERUSHA[5], b. Oct. 27, 1754; probably m. Thomas Hall April 5, 1781.
60—III. MARGARET[5], b. Dec. 28, 1758.
61—IV. JOHN[5], b. Sept. 5, 1761.
62—V. JOSEPH[5], b. Dec. 17, 1766. See below (62).
63—VI. WILLIAM[5], b. Sept. 1, 1768. See below (63).
64—VII. ESTHER[5], b. Aug. 15, 1770; probably m. Benjamin Buckman of Boston Nov. 13, 1791.
65—VIII. SARAH[5], b. Aug. 5, 1773.
66—IX. ——[5], buried June 8, 1776.
67—X. SOLOMON[5], b. March 4, 1780; m. Sarah Stocker April 15, 1801; and lived in Lynn.
68—XI. SALLY[5], b. April 17, 1786.

48

RUFUS BROWN[5], born in Lynn Sept. 17, 1744. He was a cordwainer, and lived in Boston in 1784. He married Lydia Burrill Jan. 19, 1765; and she was his wife in 1767.

Child, born in Lynn:—

69—I. EPHRAIM[6], b. April —, 1767. See below (69).

49

JOHN BROWN[5], born in Lynn Nov. 19, 1746. Probably lived in Lynn; and was dead in 1793. He probably married Elizabeth Hutchinson Oct. 4, 1766.

Child:—

70—I. RICHARD[6]. See below (70).

50

PETER BROWN[5], born in Lynn March 27, 1749. Probably lived in Lynn, and died before 1793.

Child:—

71—I. EZRA[6], living in 1793, when Joseph Bryant of Stoneham was his guardian.

51

EZRA BROWN[5], born in Lynn Nov. 2, 1750. Marched to the battle of Lexington. He was a heel maker, and lived in Lynn. He married, first, Jane Stocker Nov. 29, 1779; and she died March 25, 1805, in Lynn. He married, second, Miss Mary Mansfield Oct. 8, 1807; and she died in Saugus, being buried there Sept. 7, 1849, at the age of eighty-six. She was born in that part of Lynn which was incorporated as Saugus in 1815. Mr. Brown died in Saugus Feb. 19, 1829, at the age of seventy-eight.

Children, born in Lynn:—

72—I. MARTHA[6], b. Oct. 24, 1780.
73—II. RUTH[6], b. Jan. 2, 1783.
74—III. SARAH[6], b. Dec. 10, 1784.

When I can read my title clear
To manſions in the ſkies,
I bid farewell to ev'ry fear,
And wipe my weeping eyes.
Should earth againſt my ſoul engage,
And helliſh darts be hurl'd,
Then I can ſmile at ſatan's rage,
And face a frowning world.
Let cares, like a wild deluge come,
And ſtorms of ſorrows fall;
May I but ſafely reach my home,
My God, my heav'n, my all,
There I ſhall bathe my weary ſoul
In ſeas of heav'nly reſt
And not a wave of trouble roll
Across my peaceful breaſt.

BOWDEN NOTES.

BY CHARLES E. BANKS, M. D.

The several genealogies of the Bowden family, as given in this magazine, volume X, pages 38-45, are susceptible of some consolidation. They are all, doubtless, descendants of one or more of the name who lived early in the Province of Maine, Ambrose and John being two known to have had families there. These two may have been brothers, living in adjoining towns.

Ambrose,[1] of Scarboro, a master mariner, was captain of the vessel which brought over Thomas Cammock in 1632, and received a lot of land in Scarboro as pay for the passage; on coroner's jury, 1646; submitted to Massachusetts jurisdiction, 1658; ferryman, 1658; blind in 1670; and died Feb. 8, 1675. Walter Gendall administered upon his estate. He had one son, probably,

Ambrose[2], born about 1637 or earlier, as he was made a freeman in 1658, with his father, at Scarboro, when Massachusetts usurped jurisdiction of the Province of Maine. He was living in 1686, but the date of his death is unknown. He had three sons, probably: Ambrose[3], born in 1666; Andrew[3], petitioned the king in 1680; nothing further known of him; and John[3], born in 1670, "at Spurwinke River" [Scarboro].

Ambrose[3], born in 1666. This family appears in The Antiquarian, volume X, page 45.

John[3], born in 1670, resided at Scarboro for twenty-seven years, according to a deposition, when he removed, perhaps directly to Marblehead. He may be the "John Boden of Marblehead" who married Rebecca Fowl of Boston May 26, 1713 (Boston marriages). That he was the son of Ambrose Bowden of Scarboro is conclusively proven by York Deeds, volume XII, pages 79 and 178. It appears by the genealogy (page 38), that he had lived in Dartmouth, Mass., where he married, in 1721, Joanna Colman. His last (third?) wife was widow Sarah Oakman, whom he married in 1732. He died in 1743, being "aged" about seventy-three, according to the year of his birth. This seems to fit his case, but his marriages were all late in life, the first when he was forty-three years old.

PARTS OF SALEM AND MARBLEHEAD IN 1700.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on page 135 shows that part of Salem next Marblehead line and the western portion of Marblehead, as it was in the year 1700. It represents about seven hundred acres. All of these lots, except those marked William Sanders, Thomas Pitman and John Blaney comprised the grant made to John Humphreys, and those marked James Darling, Estate of Richard Rowland and Ambrose Gale were the fifty acres of land which Mr. Humphreys conveyed to Emmanuel Downing out of his five hundred acres, and known as the Coy pond lands. The map is drawn on a scale of seventy-two rods or twelve hundred feet to an inch; and shows the location of the only house then standing on the territory.

"Humphreys farm" was a tract of five hundred acres of land running entirely across the westerly end of the town of Marblehead. Three hundred acres of this tract had been granted to Thomas Scruggs in the year 1635 in the following words:—

This is void by the grant of another farme in Leiwe of this to mr Scrugs

ii of the 11th moneth 1635 Granted by the freemen of Salem the day and yeare above written vnto mr Thomas Scrugs of the fame his heires and assignes for ever a farme conteyning three hundreth acres of land whereof thirty acres are fitt to be mowed fcituate lying and being in the outmoft bounds of Salem towards mr Humphries* and is from the Sea where the frefhe water runs out, west and by North is the fearme next to mr Humphryes bounded by the Comon by the North weft end & east End Pvided alwayes & in Cafe of Sale, the towne of Salem haue the firft pfer before any other

This lot of Mr. Scruggs was regarded as an excellent site for the college which was about to be established in New England, and it was offered for that purpose. The offer was not accepted, however, as Newtown, now Cambridge, was nearer the seat of government and deemed more fitting, and Mr. Scruggs relinquished his right to the land to the town. John Humphreys desired a grant of the same land and two hundred acres additional, and it was granted him in the following words:—

At a genall Court or towne meeting of Salem held the fecond of the third moneth caled May A° 1636

Imprs after the reading of former orders; In the reading of an order for the divifion of Marble Head neck; A motion was brought in by Cp Endicott in behalfe of mr John Humphries for fome land beyond fforeft River, moved by spetiall arguments one whereof was, Least yt fhould hinder the building of a Colledge, wch would be manie m loffe It was agreed vpon this motion that fix men fhould be nominated by the towne to view thefe lands and to Consider of the pmifes, and for that end was named

mr Thomas Scrugs, Cp Trafke

relinquishing his farme of tooe hundred acres, It was granted vnto m^r^ Thomas Scrugs and he there vpon frely relinquished his farme of three hundred acres that foe m^r^ Humphryes might the better be accomodated.*

Mr. Humphreys lived in Salem, and was called "esquire." Sept. 6, 1638, he conveyed to Emanuel Downing of Salem, esquire, "the two ponds and so much high ground about the ponds as is needful to keepe the duck coye private from the disturbance of plowmen heardsmen or others passing by that way w^ch^ he may enclose so as he take in above fifty acres of the upland round aboute the same."† Mr. Downing was a brother-in-law of Governor Winthrop, and had brought over from England, "at great charges, all things fitting for taking wild fowl by way of Duck Coy." He obtained leave of the general court to set his decoys in these ponds. It was ordered that no man "should shoote in any gunn within a half mile of the ponds, nor use any other means for the disturbance of the fowle there," Mr. Downing returned to England, and died probably about 1657, having granted this fifty acres of land to his grandson Solomon Stoddard of Boston, gentleman, "fellow of ye College of Cambridge." For fifty pounds, Mr. Stoddard conveyed the land to Moses Maverick and Richard Rowland, both of Marblehead, May 1, 1667.‡ This tract of land comprised the lots on the map marked James Darling, Estate of Richard Rowland and Ambrose Gale.

Messrs. Maverick and Rowland conveyed to John Peach, sr., one-fourth, to John Peach, jr., one-eighth and to Samuel Ward one-eighth of this fifty acres Jan. 20, 1667.§ Some division of the land was made apparently, and Mr. Maverick and "one of the Peaches" conveyed the lot marked James Darling to George Darling, sr., of Salem, yeoman, in the seventies.‖

The lot marked Estate of Richard Rowland was Richard Rowland's portion of the Coy pond lands as probably divided. The lot marked Ambrose Gale was the one-eighth of these lands conveyed by Messrs. Maverick and Richard Rowland to Capt. Samuel Ward of Marblehead, vintner, Jan. 20, 1667.*

The remainder of Mr. Humphreys farm, about four hundred and fifty acres, was owned by him at the time of his decease. By her attorney, William Hathorne of Salem, Mrs. Lydia Bankes, late of Salem, for one hundred and thirty-three pounds, conveyed to Moses Maverick, David Corwithen, Arthur Sandin, William Charles, John Peach, the elder, and "others the inhabitants of Marblehead, all that farm called y^e^ Playnes farme ling in Salem, being 400 acres, with all y^e^ housing, &c., excepting 50 acres & 2 ponds formerly granted to Mr. Downing," 24: 7: 1645.† The list of grantees, and the amount each one paid toward the purchase is only partially known. The tract of land was subsequently divided among the purchasers in proportion to the amount each one paid.

The long line on the southwestern side of the map was the eastern line of the farm of eight hundred acres granted to John Humphreys by the general court, which became the property of Daniel King before 1700. The long strip of territory, lying between the two Humphreys grants, and marked John Blaney on the map, belonged to Salem until 1867, when the legislature annexed it to Swampscott, which was the King farm,‡ having been called Swampscott by Lady Deborah Moody probably.

Forest river was so called from the earliest settlement. Above the little bridge at Legg's hill the stream was called Frostfish brook in 1681 and 1711.

The ocean off this territory was called ye sea from 1674 onward.

‡Acts of 1867, chapter 124, approved April 3, 1867.

The road running near the Coy ponds, as shown on the map, was the ancient road leading from Salem to Marblehead. Its course in Salem was through the great pastures to the head of Broad street. Upon the laying out of the road above mentioned, in 1666, through the South fields of Salem, this fell into disuse, and was used principally to go to the Darling farm. It was called, in 1677, ye highway y^{t} goes to George Darlin's; in 1728, Boston road; and, in 1731, ye country road.

Where this road left the town was the "Marblehead gate," which was there as late as 1703. In the early settlement, each town was fenced, and at the highways gates in the fence were maintained.

The bridge over Forest river, near the present pumping station, was probably built by John Humphreys at a very early date, years before 1666, when it was in use, and has been used ever since.

The road passing over this bridge was also in use very early, and was laid out as a common way, four rods wide, in 1666.* After the new road, leading by the present lead mills, was laid out in 1737, this was called the old road to Forest river. Years later the road running around Legg's hill to the Lynn road was laid out, and that part of the old road leading easterly of Legg's hill, through "the dungeons", went out of use.

The southern highway shown on the map, is that over which electric cars now run between Marblehead and Lynn, was called ye old waye yt went to Mr. King's in 1677; ye old highway, 1682; the old country road, 1687; the old path and road which was to Lynn, 1691; ye old path and road which was formerly to Lynn, 1701; the old path, 1710; ye old highway yt formerly led from Marblehead to Lynn, 1715; highway that leads to Lynn, 1719; the old path and road which was sometimes to Lynn, 1724; ye road leading to King's farm, 1728; ye way yt leads to Reddans, 1734; and ye country road, 1739.

*The record of the laying out of this way is given in full in The Essex Antiquarian, volume IX, page 158.

William Sanders Lot. This farm of one hundred acres was owned by Nathaniel Pickman, sr., of Salem, house-carpenter, as early as 1654;* and he conveyed it to his son-in-law John Sanders of Salem, mariner, Oct. 29, 1681.† Mr. Sanders died possessed of it June 9, 1694, having, by his will, devised it to his wife, Hannah Sanders, for her life, and then to his son William Sanders in fee.

Samuel Archer, aged about seventy-one and Jonathan Ager, aged about sixty-five, both of Salem, testified Feb. 12, 1704-5, that they well knew this farm that is now Mrs. Hannah Sanders, and that they wrought upon it for Nathaniel Pickman upwards of fifty years before.*

Mrs. Sanders died March 18, 1706-7; and William Sanders, who was then of Boston, shopkeeper, conveyed the farm to Maj. Samuel Browne, esquire, of Salem, "with ye new house", April 26, 1711.‡

James Darling House. George Darling, sr., of Salem, yeoman, bought this lot of about twenty acres of "Moses Maverick and one of the Peaches" in the seventies.§ Mr. Darling erected a house on the lot, and lived there. He died in the summer of 1693, having, in his will, given his estate to his wife Katherine for her widowhood, and the house and this lot of land to his son James Darling. The house, garden, orchard and remainder of the lot were appraised at ninety-five pounds. James Darling was a shoreman and lived here. He owned the lot in 1716, the house having probably been gone fifteen years.

Estate of Richard Rowland Lot. Richard Rowland died possessed of this lot in the summer of 1685, his will, dated April 24, 1685, being proved June 30, 1685. He devised this land to his son John Rowland and his children. It was then appraised at thirty pounds. John Rowland died, leaving no issue, before Dec. 4, 1693, when administration was granted upon his estate to his widow, Abigail Rowland. The land was then appraised at twenty-four pounds. It remained a portion of the estate of his father, Richard Rowland, until 1716.

Ambrose Gale Lot. This lot comprised one-eighth of the Coy pond lands, which were conveyed by John Humphreys to Emanuel Downing in 1638, this one-eighth part having been conveyed by Moses Maverick and Richard Rowland to Capt. Samuel Ward of Marblehead, vintner, Jan. 20, 1667.* For twelve pounds, Captain Ward conveyed it to Ambrose Gale of Marblehead, merchant, Jan. 10, 1685;† and Mr. Gale owned it until his death, which occurred in the summer of 1708.

Thomas Pitman Lot. That part of this lot lying easterly of the dashes belonged to Samuel Archard of Salem, carpenter, June 8, 1661, when, for four pounds, he conveyed it to Thomas Pitman.‡

That part of the lot lying westerly of the dashes belonged to Henry Harwood as early as 1661, and soon after to Thomas Moore, who sold it to Mr. Stileman, sr. It belonged to Capt. James Smith of Marblehead, mariner, Aug. 26, 1668, when he sold it to William Flint of Salem, husbandman.§ Mr. Flint conveyed it to Thomas Pitman March 16, 1669‖

Thus Mr. Pitman became the owner of the whole lot, of which he died possessed in the summer of 1694. It belonged to his heirs in 1700.

Mr. Pitman's children, Joseph Pitman, Sarah Dod and Mary Fortune, survived him, and his daughter Elizabeth Knight and son John Pitman died before himself. Mrs. Knight's son, Thomas Russell of Marblehead, mariner, as trustee for his mother's children, conveyed one-fifth of this part of the lot to his uncle Thomas Pitman, jr., executor of the will of the father of the latter, Oct. 22, 1696.* John Pitman, the son, left widow Charity and children, Joseph, John, Abiel and Mary Pitman. As trustee for her children, Mrs. Charity Pitman conveyed one-fifth of this part of the lot to said Thomas Pitman Dec. 26, 1696.†

Joseph Doliber Lot. Joseph Doliber owned this lot in 1677, and died possessed of it in 1688. His estate owned it in 1700.

John Holmes Lot. This lot was part of the plain farm, being all that Henry Stacy, sr., of Salem, husbandman, bought in said farm. For fifteen pounds, he conveyed it to John Holmes June 9, 1677,‡ and Mr. Holmes died possessed of it in 1718.

Thomas Pitman Lot. This lot is supposed to include, on its western side, the lot conveyed by Francis Johnson of Boston, merchant, to Edward Hoeman of Marblehead before May 12, 1677.

The remainder of the lot belonged to Nathaniel Walton in 1677. Francis Johnson of Boston, merchant, and wife Hannah, conveyed it to Thomas Pitman, sr., of Marblehead May 12, 1677.§

Mr. Pitman died possessed of the whole lot in the summer of 1694. It was then appraised at thirty pounds. Under the will of Mr. Pitman, his grandson, Thomas Russell, was trustee for his brothers and sisters. Mr. Russell died, and his brother-in-law, Amos Dennis (husband of Elizabeth Russell), was executor of his will. For six pounds, Mr. Dennis, in his capacity of said executor, conveyed one-fifth of the lot to his wife's uncle, Thomas Pitman, jr., July 19, 1697.‖ The remainder of the heirs continued to own their interests in 1700.

Ambrose Gale Lot. This was one-eighth of the land laid out to Nicholas Merritt in the plain farm, which descended to his son John Merritt of Marblehead, mariner, who sold it to Ambrose Gale of Marblehead, merchant, some years before 1701. Mr. Gale, for six pounds, conveyed it to John Palmer of Marblehead, fisherman, August 5, 1701.*

John Merritt conveyed another eighth part of this lot to John Legg of Marblehead, merchant, Jan. 22, 1691.†

John Codner Lot. John Codner of Marblehead, fisherman, owned this lot in 1699; and died possessed of it in the early spring of 1710.

Nathaniel Norden Lot. This part of the plain farm, containing thirty-nine acres and one hundred and thirty-five rods, belonged to Moses Maverick of Marblehead, having been assigned to him, in the division, for fifteen pounds. He died Jan. 28, 1685-6; and, by agreement of the heirs, Archibald Ferguson of Marblehead, mariner, and Moses Hawke of Lynn, planter, as their attorneys, for sixty-five pounds, conveyed this lot to Nathaniel Norden, esq., of Marblehead Sept. 4, 1699.‡ Mr. Norden died, possessed of it, March 1, 1727-8.

John Legg and Samuel Legg Lot. John Legg of Marblehead owned this lot very early; and died, possessed of it, in the early part of 1674. This eight acres of the plain farm was devised to his three sons, Samuel, John, and youngest son Daniel. It was then valued at seventeen pounds. Daniel died, unmarried, before March 16, 1690, when his brothers, Capt. Samuel Legg of Boston, mariner, the eldest son, and John Legg of Marblehead, merchant, made a division of it, Samuel taking the northeastern part and John the southwestern part;§ and they owned their respective portions in 1700.

James Smith Lot. This was a lot from ninety to one hundred acres in extent, and a part of Mr. Humphreys' farm. It belonged to Capt. James Smith of Marblehead, mariner, Feb. 4, 1674, when he conveyed it to Symond Lynde of Boston, merchant. At that time there was "housing" upon the lot, and it was in the occupation of Micha Bowds, sometime of Salem, husbandman.* This was probably a mortgage, as Captain Smith owned the lot in 1700.

James Dennis, Amos Dennis and Annis Trevie Lot. This was the share of William Charles of Marblehead in the Humphreys farm; and he died, possessed of the lot, in 1672 (?), having devised it, in his will, to James Dennis, blacksmith, Amos Dennis, fisherman, and Thomas Trefey (or Trevie), shoreman, in right of his wife Annis, all of Marblehead. The several parties owned it in 1700.

Jonathan Norman Lot. This lot belonged to Richard Norman in 1687, and to Jonathan Norman of Marblehead in 1700.

Mrs. Mary Woods Lot. John Peach of Marblehead, planter, owned this part of the plain farm early, and, with his wife Alice, conveyed it to his natural daughter Mary, wife of William Woods of Marblehead, spinster, Dec. 30, 1687.† Her son, John Woods of Marblehead, owned it with her in 1710.

Robert Bartlett Lot. That part of the lot lying westerly of the dashes belonged to William Bartoll, jr., of Salem, mariner, Dec. 11, 1682, when he conveyed it to Capt. Robert Bartlett of Marblehead, yeoman.‡

That part lying easterly of the dashes also belonged to Mr. Bartlett in 1682.

Mr. Bartlett was deceased in 1719.

Samuel Reed Lot. This lot belonged to Richard Rowland before 1680. He died in 1685, having devised this lot to his daughter Abigail Reed. The lot was then valued at seventy pounds. In 1689, it belonged to Samuel Reed, and in 1718 to Ester Reed of Marblehead, spinster.

Benjamin Ireson Lot. This lot belonged to John and Parnall Bartoll, who were both deceased Feb. 4, 1688-9, when their eldest son, heir-at-law and administrator, William Bartoll (wife Mary), for thirty-three pounds, conveyed it to Benjamin Ireson of Lynn, planter.* Mr. Ireson died possessed of it in 1705.

"Aye, white and whiter still!" cries he,
"As white as snow my work must be!"

Upon the warp and woof new-spun,
Falls chill of frost and fire of sun,
The bitter storm's relentless pain,
The gentle dew and nursing rain,
The while the bleacher's watchful eye
Each spot and blemish doth descry.
"Without a blot or fault," cries he,
"As pure as snow my work shall be!"

Unwearied plies his skilful hand,
Fulfilling all his thought had planned.
Nor doth the bruised flax complain,
Or question aught he may ordain.

FIRST QUAKER MEETING HOUSE IN SALEM

Sketched by James H. Emerton in 1861

THE ESSEX ANTIQUARIAN.

VOL. XIII. SALEM, MASS., OCTOBER, 1909. NO. 4.

FIRST QUAKER MEETING HOUSE IN SALEM.

THE Quakers gained converts in Salem as early as in any locality in America. The first missionaries to arrive in New England came in the summer of 1656, and appeared in Salem soon after their landing. In spite of the terrible persecution bythe Congregationalists that followed a society was established, and, although the membership has been small, it is continued.

At first, for more than thirty years, services were held in the dwelling houses of the members, an ordinary room accommodating the attendants.

In his time, the Friends of Salem had no stauncher friend than Thomas Maule. He did much to defend the tenets of his sect as well as to render material assistance to the society. He was an Englishman, and arrived in Salem about 1669, at the age of twenty-four. He suffered at the hands of the magistrates with other of his associates in the faith. He was a man of broad interests, active and influential. At first a tailor, he later became a merchant dealing in hardware, dry goods, medicines,‖ groceries, country produce, furs, staves, tobacco, grain, hay and liquors. He had much to do with building and changing over of buildings, and of buying and selling real estate, at different times owning various properties.

In the autumn of 1688, he erected a small building in which the Friends could hold religious services, upon the northwestern corner of his six-acre lot of land. This site is what is now the open space between the house of Nathan P. Gifford and Grace church, at about 377 Essex street. According to an agreement on record in the registry of deeds,* he was building the meeting house Sept. 14, 1688. Evidently, the building was constructed of such old timber as Mr. Maule had taken from other buildings. It measured about twenty-one feet in length, eighteen feet in breadth and nine and one-half feet in height. For forty-five pounds, Oct. 13, 1690, he conveyed the meeting house and land upon which it stood to Josiah and Daniel Southwick, Samuel Gaskin, Caleb Buffum, Christopher Foster and Sarah Stone, all of Salem, "Sam[ll] Collins of Lyn & severall others of y[e] people called Quakers in y[e] County."† In this building the Friends held their services for nearly thirty years.

Though the number of attendants was very small the meeting house was found to be inadequate, and in 1714 steps were taken to erect a building forty feet long, thirty-four feet wide and eighteen feet post.‡ Subsequently, the Monthly Meeting of the Friends apparently deemed that a smaller building would be amply sufficient and voted that it should be forty feet long but only thirty feet wide.‡ Oct. 3, 1716, the Friends agreed to sell the old meeting house to Mr. Maule for twenty-five pounds.‡ The deed of the meeting house and land belonging to it to Mr. Maule was given by Daniel Southwick, Samuel Gascoyn, Caleb Buffum and Samuel Collins, "being all that are Surviving of y[e] nominated purchafers ffor & on behalfe of Themselues thier hiers Executors & adminiſtrators as well as on behalfe of thier friends as before defcribed that are any wayes intrested in y^e^ old house & Land within mentioned . . as its now fenced in with y^e^ old houfing Thereupon," Nov. 18, 1718.*

The old meeting house then became the western portion of a dwelling house, having been added to, and was occupied by various tenants. One of them was Enos Pope, a Quaker.

Mr. Maule died in 1724, and his widow and children released to his son Joseph Maule of Salem, mariner, their interest in the premises July 13, 1747.†

William Browne, esq., of Salem brought a suit at law against Joseph Maule, recovered judgment, and had the execution levied upon this house and land Nov. 17, 1750.‡

In 1752, the house was occupied by Richard Maiberry, blacksmith, and Abraham Fowler, mariner.§

While Mr. Browne owned the estate, soon after that date, the meeting house part of this dwelling house was removed from this site; and about 1756 appears upon the David Nichols farm, under Gallows hill. This farm was owned and occupied at that time by Thorndike Proctor, also a Quaker. His son Robert was married about that time, and lived in this little house for many years. In it his son Benjamin was born in 1775 and daughter Sarah in 1787. The farm descended to Thorndike Proctor's son Thorndike Proctor, who occupied the Nichols house until his death, in 1792. The farm was devised by the will of Thorndike Proctor, jr., to his brother Robert, who probably at that time discarded the little house and moved into his father's house. From that time the little house was used as a barn, and finally a cow barn, hen house and wood shed. It was standing there in 1860, when it was sketched with pencil by James H. Emerton. A small window with diamond panes of glass, set in lead, had remained in the building through all its vicissitudes. Mr. Emerton's drawing is reproduced in the frontispiece of this number of The Essex Antiquarian.

The Friends always spoke of the little building as the "first meeting house," and because of that reference, some persons deemed it to be the first meeting house of the Congregationalists, and brought about its removal to the grounds of the Essex Institute, where for nearly fifty years it has been preserved. The height of the building was increased two and one-half feet at the time of its removal to the Institute, because of an erroneous interpretation of a record having reference to the first meeting house in Salem, and a new covering put upon the old frame.

This is probably the oldest meeting house of the Friends in existence, and it is hoped that the Institute will preserve it not only for its antiquity and historical associations, but in memory of the silent worshippers who have done so much for the elevation of woman and elimination of war and litigation.

IPSWICH INSCRIPTIONS.

SOUTH CEMETERY.

The South parish of Ipswich chose a committee to confer with a committee of the First parish about purchasing land on the south side of Ipswich river for a burying ground May 21, 1773. An agreement was immediately effected, and the two parishes united in purchasing ninety-eight square rods of land for the use of both parishes for this purpose. The land was bought of Nathaniel Dutch of Ipswich, yeoman, for thirty-two pounds, thirteen shillings and four pence, the deed being dated Aug. 20, 1773.* The lot measured seven rods next the street and was thirteen and one-half rods deep. An addition of about the same size was made, in the rear of the old part, May 22, 1795, by the purchase of some land of John Manning, esq., of Ipswich, for thirty-two pounds, six shillings and eight pence.† The following are all the inscriptions to be found there bearing dates prior to 1800

23

Rev. Richard Brown,[4] born in Newbury Sept. 12, 1675. He graduated at Harvard college in 1697, and lived at first in his native town, where he was town clerk five years and schoolmaster eleven years. When about to remove from Newbury he wrote the following upon a fly-leaf of the town book:—

"I have served Newbury as schoolmaster eleven years and as town clerk five years and a half, and have been repaid with abuse, contempt and ingratitude. I have sent nigh as many to College as all the masters before me since the reverend and learned Parker. Those that I have bred think themselves better than their master (God make them better still), and yet they may remember the foundation of all their growing greatness was laid in the sweat of my brows. I pray that poor unacknowledging Newbury may get them that may serve them better and find thanks when they have done. If, to find a house for the school when the town had none; if, to take the scholars to my own fire when there was no wood at school, as frequently; if, to give records to the poor, and record their births and deaths gratis, deserves acknowledgement, then it is my due, but hard to come by.

"Est aliqua ingrato meritum exprobare voluptas Hoc fruar hœc de te gandia sola ferum."

Mr. Brown had a farm in Haverhill, which he probably carried on to some extent.

In a journal Mr. Brown wrote as follows some years later:—

I Richard Brown was born in Newbury Sept. 12, Anno 1675 and educated under the wing of my parence, especially my mother, who was a pious and prudent woman, and endeavored to instill into this her son the principals of Religion and holiness; yea she traveled in Birth with me again to have ⸗ formed in me, and was upon all opportunities discourcing to me Life and Death, sin and holiness, Heaven and hell, to raise in me a Love, a Licking and Longing after the one, and a hatred and abhorance of the other; she was unwearied in her watchings, instructions, admonitions, warnings, reproofs & exhortations, that she might bring up this her son in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and continued she to train me up betimes, and when she had caused me to read well at home, she sent me to school under an ingenious and learned master, Mr. Edward Tompson, under wm I profited much and went on with delight in Gramer, Sententie and Cato. But then I was deprived of my master, who, being calld to the ministry, Left the schoole to his pupils gt damage. After came Mr Shove, to wm I went yet profited Little; then came another who tarried not Long; then came Mr John Clark of Exeter, a worthy man under wm I studied one year, by whome I was sent to, tho not well fitted for, the Colledge; for by this change of masters I suffered gt damage. I went to Colledge 1693 and then I spent 4 years under the care & inspection of that worthy man Mr William Brattle, then fellow; wn being in the heat of youth and active, I spent too much time in play & pastime, wc I after gtly bewailed. When those 4 years wr expired July Anno 1697 I had given me with the rest of my class the Degree of B: B of Arts. My Parence not being well able to keep me longer at Colledge, I was forced much against my will to leave the Coll: and to return home, wc ws much to my disadvantage; for being at home I wanted books, and more, money to buy them; so was fored to Borrow here and there as I could. By this, then I lost much time & contracted a listlessness to study, yet read over all the vollumes of Foxes Acts and Monuments, wc I much delighted in, and know much of espetially the two last vollums, wc I read over diverse times, where, in my young years, I showed a tender heart, yt could not forbeare melting into tears, when I read of the cruelty showed against the Masters and Blessed servants of Jesus Christ. Thus continued I, sometimes Reading History and sometimes Divinity for two years, wc being near expired, tho much against my mind, yet being overpowered with importunity, I was prevailed with to preach in June '99, and when I came into the pulpit, being naturally bashfull, and seeing a great throngue and crowde of people before me, my spirit was overwhelmed. . .

"Feb. 21, 1700—I was called to Teach the Gramr school in Newbry, which I accepted, and went on with delight to train up youth in Learning and the knowledge and fear of God and teaching them to reverence yr Superiors. . .

"I continued in the school and preached sometimes as occasions presented for helping one and another."

Mr. Brown married Miss Martha Whipple of Ipswich April 22, 1703; and, being called to a pastorate in Reading, removed thither. In his journal he wrote of this as follows:—

"Sept 17, 1711. I laid down ye school in Newbury in order to go to Redding to preach ye gospel there, at yr frequent and earnest request. Nov. 7, I brought my goods from Newbury to Ipswich; Nov. 9, from Ipswich to Redding, and Nov. 15, moved my wife and family to Redding."

He was ordained pastor of the church at Reading June 25, 1712; and died there Oct. 29, 1732, aged fifty-seven. His wife survived him, and with the children returned to Newbury.

PART OF MARBLEHEAD IN 1700.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on the opposite page is of a part of Marblehead, and represents, within the space marked "Robert Devereaux", about three hundred and fifty acres. The scale of the map is twelve hundred feet to an inch. This tract of land was granted to Rev. Hugh Peter by the town of Salem in 163–; and when he went to England he gave his property into the care of one of his deacons in Salem, Charles Gott. For one hundred pounds sterling, Mr. Gott, who had removed to Wenham, conveyed the land to John Devereaux of Marblehead, fisherman, July 1, 1659.*

The road to the neck as shown on the map was laid out in 1721, and the old road ran from a point in the main road about twenty-five rods westerly from the junction of the two roads down to the western end of the beach and the neck. See plan on file in the office of the county commissioners, at Salem, discovered by Mr. Buck since this map was made.

In 1660, Mr. Peter was executed. Mr. Devereaux continued in possession of the property, having built a house upon the eastern part of the lot.

Mr. Devereaux died in the spring of 1695, his will dated Sept. 4, 1693, being proved May 20, 1695. He provided as follows: "I give and bequeath unto my son Robert Devereux two thirds of all my land within the Stonnwall now lying in marblehead being three hundred Acres more or less with my now dwelling house and Barne, only I give unto my son Roberts son Joseph twenty Acres of land within y^e^ stonn wall which is out of the two thirds of my son Roberts land before mentioned which land lying next to marblehead comon jyning to my land without the stonn wall, when he shall be 21 years of age, . . . to remaine in the family and name of the Devereuxes from generation to generation in way of intale forever and ever." The other third was devised to the three sons of the testator's deceased son Humphrey Devereaux,—Joseph (one-half), Humphrey (one-quarter) and Ralph (one-quarter).

After the decease of Mr. Devereaux, the daughter and heir of Hugh Peter claimed title to the land, alleging that Deacon Gott had insufficient authority to execute the deed. The widow, Mrs. Ann Devereaux, one of the executors of the will of Mr. Devereaux, of whom the demand for possession was made, consulted the children and friends, who advised her not to contest the claim, and she did not. The son, Robert Devereaux, to whom the two-thirds were given, obtained a deed from Elizabeth Barker of London, England, "only daughter and heiress of Hugh Peters sometime heretofore of Salem, clerk," deceased, June 29, 1704.*

Robert Devereaux lived here, being a tanner, and died many years afterward. How long the house stood after 1704 is uncertain.

ANSWERS.

513. John Wardwell,[4] born in 1719, died in 1799. He married Jane Campbell of Haverhill for his first wife; and second, Lydia Hardy of Bradford. The latter died in November, 1774, having come from the Second church in Bradford to the church in Andover in 1760. John was a tanner, and lived, first, on the estate in the rear of Draper building, now called Newman estate, and later in Frye village, near Donald's ink mill. His children were apparently all by his first wife Lydia and three of their names were Lydia, Dorothy and John. It would seem that the desired line was through Jacob Hardy[2] and his wife Lydia Eaton. She was born in 1662, and she died in 1737. Jacob died in 1713. He had a son Joseph Hardy,[3] born Oct. 20, 1692, who had, first, a wife Sarah, whom he lost in April, 1730. Oct. 2, 1730, he took a second wife, Ruth Kimball; and among his children was a Lydia born in 1696, Ruth, born in 1699, and Eunice, born in 1701, who became the wife of John Foster of Hardwick, Mass., head of the Weare line. This family lacks records, and it is very difficult to get information. In the division of the estate of Jacob Hardy, an uncle Joseph[2] is mentioned. The latter died, unmarried, leaving an estate which was undivided in 1737. Moreover, this family used the name of Lydia extensively, and a grandson of Lydia was named Asa Kimball Wardwell, and his mother, Sarah Trussell, on her side had no reason for giving him that name.—Charlotte H. Abbott, Andover.

515. A chain in land measurements is four rods, equall to sixty-six feet in length, and is made up of one hundred links. Thus three chains and sixty-seven links is equivalent to three and sixty-three hundredths chains, or two hundred and forty-two and twenty-two hundredths feet.—T. H. Loomis, Steubenville, O.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

JOHN HOOD OF LYNN, MASSACHUSETTS, AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS. By Mrs. Jennie (Hood) Bosson. Salem, Mass., 1909. This is a reprint from the Historical Collections of the Essex Institute. It contains forty-four octavo pages, and gives the early generations completely. Price, in paper, fifty cents; in boards, seventy-five cents. Address the Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.

NEW ENGLANDS PLANTATION. By Rev. Francis Higginson. London, 1630. The Essex Book and Print Club has reprinted this valuable and interesting ancient book in fac-simile. With it is included the author's General Considerations for the planting of New England; his agreement with the New England Company; his True Relation of the voyage to New England in 1629; and the letter that he sent to his friends at Leicester. An index adds value to the edition.

NOTICE OF DISCONTINUANCE.

The termination of the publication of THE ESSEX ANTIQUARIAN has been in contemplation for two or three years. It has been continued, however, in spite of physical difficulties and lack of time. Ninety-five per cent. of its contents has been the product of the labor of the editor, principally from research in original records. The constant demand upon his time and strength in this labor of love ought not to be indulged further.

The publishers thank the public for its oft-repeated words of commendation and generous support, there having been no period when funds were lacking. This is extraordinary, as magazines of this class usually live from three to five years, and are discontinued because of non-support.

The interest of the publishers is unabated after the lapse of thirteen years, during which period the issues of the work have appeared on time; and the discontinuance is regretted exceedingly.

The Essex Antiquarian was purposed to fill a want. It was designed to be a leader in scientific historical research; and to present copies or abstracts of records and compilations in an exhaustive and systematic manner, so that as far as the publication extended further investigation along those lines would be needless. Repeated examinations of records tend to their destruction, and thousands of dollars have been spent locally upon the same records for the same purpose by various persons who were ignorant of costly examinations made by others. This purpose, if prosecuted, would preserve the records and make further expenditure of money and labor unnecessary. This has been the particular reason of the appearance of the genealogies in alphabetical order, the gravestone inscriptions, abstracts of the Salem and Ipswich quarterly court records and files, old Norfolk county records, all wills in the order of their probate, Essex Gazette notes, abstracts of titles to land, etc., as shown in Salem, Haverhill, Ipswich and Marblehead in 1700, and in Georgetown and Topsfield in 1800.

During the thirteen years of its existence there have been published in The Essex Antiquarian genealogies of all families from Abbe to Brown; all gravestone inscriptions dated prior to the year 1800 in Amesbury, Andover, Beverly, Boxford, Bradford, Danvers, Essex, Georgetown, Gloucester, Groveland, Hamilton, Haverhill and Ipswich; all wills proved in the county prior to June, 1666; the record of the Essex county Revolutionary soldiers and sailors alphabetically to Brown; abstracts of the old Norfolk records to 1675; Salem and Ipswich quarterly court records and files to 1659; and abstracts of all records in the first ten volumes of the Suffolk county registry of deeds relating to Essex county persons and property, where parties resided or property was located in Essex county, covering the period prior to 1678.
